Shimon Took $1000 Bill, Policeman Tells Probers

Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

Senator Claude Pepper (D., Fla.) said last night his Senate wire-tapping inquiry committee had been given testimony that Lieut. Joseph Shimon of the Metropolitan police was seen to put a $1000 bill in his wallet in mid-August, 1947.

Attorneys for Shimon told reporters they were confident the lieutenant had not committed any criminal offense. As for the alleged incident of the $1000 bill, Attorney Nicholas Chase said that as far as he knew the report of the incident was untrue, and if the lieutenant had put a $1000 bill in his wallet, that was not an offense.

Followed Hughes Inquiry

Pepper told a press conference the incident occurred, according to testimony to the committee, within a few days after a period when Lieutenant Shimon participated in day-in, day-out wire tapping of the hotel phones of Howard Hughes, millionaire plane maker.

The period of wire tapping, said Pepper, coincided with the investigation of Hughes' war contracts by the Senate committee headed by Senator Owen Brewster (R., Me.).

Pepper said the testimony was given by Police Pvt. John McHale. He was the sole witness in a two-hour closed-door session of the special Senate committee, headed by Pepper. The closed hearings will resume today. Later open hearings are planned.

The Capitol Hill meeting began while Shimon was making his second appearance before the Federal Grand Jury investigating wire tapping. Shimon has not yet been called to the Hill for quizzing, but is expected to be later. Shimon went into the grand jury room about 1:45 p. m. and left about 4:45 p. m. At that time he said only that he had been excused.

Told to Answer Questions

Attorneys Chase and Robert Lynch, counsel for Shimon, said the officer had been instructed by them to answer the grand jury's questions. But Chase emphasized this did not include instruction for Shimon to waive his Constitutional rights.

Lynch added that Shimon's counsel feels that the officer has done nothing wrong and that his actions have been neither improper nor illegal.

Chase, reached by phone last night at Rehoboth Beach, Del., said that from his knowledge of transactions attributed to Shimon, the officer has not committed any criminal offense.

"From a careful study of his activities," said Chase, "I can find no semblance of a violation of any Federal criminal statute."

He said it might be that the wire-tapping probes might lead to recommendations for changing

House Cites Red Leader

STEVE NELSON

House Votes Steve Nelson In Contempt

The House voted contempt citations yesterday against Communist leader Steve Nelson and union official Julius Emspak, but was forced to postpone action on 56 other witnesses accused of flouting the authority of the Un-American Activities Committee.

House leaders had hoped to run quickly through the entire list, the largest number of contempt citations ever brought before Congress, but the proceedings ran into a snag just as the chamber took up the case of Phillip Bart, manager of the New York Communist Daily Worker.

Representative Clare Hoffman, (R., Mich.) called attention to the absence of a quorum, and House Democratic leader John W. McCormack, (Mass.) put off the remainder of the cases until Friday.

Emspak Vote Is 372-1

Before the hitch arose, the House had cited Emspak on a roll-call vote of 372 to 1, and Nelson by overwhelming voice vote.

Their cases will be referred to the Justice Department for prosecution. Conviction carries a maximum penalty of one year in jail and a $1000 fine.

Emspak, of New York, is secretary-treasurer of the left-wing United Electrical Workers (Ind.) Nelson is Communist Party organizer in western Pennsylvania.

Both refused to answer committee questions about alleged subversive activities.

Representative Vito Marcantonio (ALP, N. Y.) cast the lone vote against the Emspak citation, and was the only House member to speak in opposition to the committee's plea for a crackdown on the "rebellious witnesses."

Most of the accused witnesses refused to answer questions about Communist affiliations on constitutional grounds of self-incrimination.

72 Answers Refused

But Representative Francis E. Walter (D., Pa.) told the House that Emspak "just didn't see fit" to answers 72 questions, including the key one: "Are you now or have you ever been a member of the Communist Party?"

Marcantonio accused the committee of undermining the very constitutional freedoms it seeks to protect.

Truman Hits Russia's U. N. Filibustering

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

President Truman yesterday accused the Russians of filibustering in the United Nations, where a stalemate has been reached on the Korean issue.

"Would you care to say what it (Russia) is filibustering against?" a reporter asked.

Mr. Truman said he thought it was against themselves principally. He didn't elaborate.

The Chief Executive told a news conference—for what must have been the fiftieth time—there is not going to be any meeting between him and Premier Stalin. He said he was in favor of anything that will contribute to the peace of the world, but pointed out that the United Nations could very well handle any conference involving Russia and the West.

Optimistic on Korea

Other highlights of Mr. Truman's news conference were:

He takes his military advice from our military leaders, and he is as optimistic as they are over Korea. (He looked optimistic, too.)

He is satisfied with the job Gen. Douglas MacArthur is doing in the Far East. Apropos MacArthur's charge that "defeatists" and "appeasers" were trying to misrepresent his recent conference with Chiang Kai-shek in Formosa, the President said he hasn't met anybody bent on setting him against MacArthur.

He still doesn't think the time is in sight for using price and wage controls, which Congress seems ready to give him on a standby basis.

He thinks the Federal Government, thanks to reorganization and improvements over the last five years, has an administrative set-up than can meet any emergency. Replying to a question, he said the reporter could take that to mean that there would be no revival of OPA.

He would take an excess-profits tax if Congress voted for one, but he feels the matter ought to go over until after the November election.

Position on Profits Tax

A reporter told the President there were conflicting reports on his stand with respect to an excess-profits tax, with some of his friends saying he wanted one as of now and others saying he didn't want one at this time.

Mr. Truman, outlining his position, said that, as in the case of controls, he had asked Congress for a tax program he hoped could be promptly enacted. An excess-profits tax is very controversial, he said eventually there will be

Wallace Brands Russia Aggressor, Says We're at War

New York, Aug. 10 (AP).—A disillusioned Henry A. Wallace tonight said the United States actually is at war with Russia in the fighting in Korea.

"Russia is clearly the aggressor," the former Vice President said.

Until six months ago, he said, he believed Russia wanted to end its conflict with the Western world.

Problems Different Now

World War II Controls Seen Excessive for Current Needs

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter
(The second in a series)

Americans are surely willing to accept whatever economic controls are needed to provide the military establishment with what it needs.

They are eager—overeager—to accept them even if they include wage and price fixing, rationing and manpower directives.

But does it takes those kinds of controls to do the job? Are they needed to get the defense program the materials, munitions and men it requires?

In World War II, it can be argued, controls of that nature were needed. They made the job cheaper and more effective.

But the problem was much larger then.

The combined military needs now planned or in sight call for somewhere between 8 to 15 percent of what the Nation produces. During the war they gobbled up as much as 35 percent—more than one third—of the country's total output.

There are other important differences in the two situations.

At the outset of World War II, there were absolute, not merely relative, shortages of materials and facilities for military use. That is, quite aside from any domestic civilian demand whatsoever, there was not enough aluminum or rubber or merchant ships and shipyards for national defense needs.

The competition for materials even among purely military producers was such that an A-1 priority only entitled a fellow to go shopping for some items.

Huge expansion programs, costly in money and men and materials, had to be undertaken. These were to build shipyards, synthetic rubber plants, aluminum works, tin smelters, pipelines, power installations, new aircraft, tank, gun and explosive plants, and so forth.

Today those facilities are built and available. This is not to say that there is thus no need for expansion. On the contrary, some enlargement of productive facilities—steel, in particular—should be undertaken, and is being planned.

But the fact remains that for military and combined defense needs, there is no absolute deficiency in any major raw material, and no comparable need for constructing new facilities.

We have more supplies, the capacity to produce more supplies, and our major supply line from Southeast Asia is not cut off. So America faces a new defense program in much better shape than 10 years ago. With more materials available, the pressures to secure them, and the competition for their use between the military and the civilians, and among the civilians, will be much less severe.

We are not obliged today, as we were before, to furnish a great portion of food and other civilian supplies to England and Russia and, after D-day, to progressively larger portions of Europe.

In food, incidentally, America now faces the prospect of the greatest abundance in history, a prospect that makes present hoarding as ridiculous as it is shameful.

The manpower situation is more favorable now than in 1940 and 1941. Though there were some eight or nine million unemployed at the outbreak of the war, constituting a "slack" to be taken up, those people are now employed about where they ought to be. This is an advantage, not a drawback.

The workers don't have to be put to work; they're at work, and mainly in the industrial and machine occupations where they should be for defense production. They are at 40 hours a week now, and can go to 44 or 48. They are trained and the "work habits" don't have to be instilled in them.

They can be switched from autos to tanks, from television to radar, with a minimum of shifting around, retraining and general hurly-burly.

In the war, it was necessary to put some 13 million men of the most productive ages into uniform. Now the prospect is for something over two million. Call it three million to allow for too timid present estimates, and you still have less than one-fourth as many taken out of production, and less than one-fourth as many to be fed and clothed.

Again, the warning is necessary that all of the estimates and the conclusions derived from them are on the assumption that we are not now mobilizing for a world war. If we become engaged in one, the manpower picture could be very serious. In the present program it is not.

The control powers President Truman initially asked for appear ample to secure production and delivery of the present and prospective short-of-world-war defense program.

The power to allocate and establish priorities for the military is certainly adequate to meet steel needs, to take one critical example. The military requirements for steel appear to be only 10 percent of total steel production.

The authority Mr. Truman requested to help finance production expansion is as great as existed in World War II. The problem then certainly was greater. Finally, for the case of the recalcitrant and tough customer, the President asked for the right to requisition materials and production facilities.

Together, these powers would guarantee that the armed services get first crack at having their orders filled from a supply abundant for military needs.

The question whether what is left from that supply is enough for civilian needs will be discussed in subsequent articles.

Home-Front Curbs Pass By 382-12

Power to Limit Speculation Loses; Senators Open Debate on Bill

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

By a whopping 383-to-12 vote, the House yesterday finally passed the home-front mobilization bill with broad standby price, wage and rationing powers for the President.

The overwhelming bipartisan indorsement was an obvious tribute to the power of public sentiment "back home" that has been demanding Congress do something about rising prices as well as about the war.

The measure now goes to the Senate, which yesterday formally began debate on a closely parallel version of what is formally called "The Defense Production Act of 1950." Estimates of how long the Senate will take to reach apparently certain passage eventually varied last night from a few days to a week or more.

Vote Is 198 to 194

The final House battles were over control of credit other than for new building construction and over control of speculation on commodity markets.

The Administration lost on speculation control powers, one of the measures specifically asked for by President Truman, on a close roll-call vote of 198 to 194.

Another roll-call vote, 202 to 188, limited private real estate credit controls to new construction begun after August 3, 1950, thus exempting sales of "used houses."

But on a third roll call, the Administration was able to reinstate a broad definition of "credit," previously stricken on a teller vote. This roll call was 223 to 173.

This definition was the Administration's "sleeper" provision, but it was far from clear last night just what effect its inclusion would have.

Such Administration supporters as Representative Buchanan (D., Pa.) said it was an "umbrella" provision drafted at the White House to cover all sorts of credit—broad enough, in fact, to negate the two roll calls limiting credit controls.

Republican opponents disputed this but admitted the courts could argue about it for a long

A second unscheduled passenger has turned up aboard the Europe-bound Polish motorship Batory, the Government disclosed late yesterday.

The Justice Department said the Gdynia-American Line identified the man as Howard E. Campbell, and listed him as an American citizen, of Des Moines, Iowa. The department said Campbell evidently boarded the Batory as a stowaway before the ship left the United States.

Another man, with a passport bearing the name of William Jesse Newton, was reported by the Batory Wednesday to have landed a rented seaplane alongside the ship 100 miles out in the Atlantic. He was taken aboard.

The Justice Department said both men will be detained and questioned by American and British authorities when the Batory docks at Southampton, England, Tuesday or Wednesday.

Reds Mass 5 Divisions Near Taegu

Tokyo (Friday) Aug. 11 (AP). — General MacArthur's headquarters reported today that North Korean Communists are massing four—possibly five—divisions along the flaming Naktong River line on the central Korean front.

It was not clear if the Reds planned an immediate attack to relieve an estimated 1000 North Koreans trapped east of the river defense line.

Reds inside the United States trap near Chinju were reported "struggling frantically" to blast out of encirclement closed around them when units of the Army's Fifth Regimental combat team and the Twenty-fifth Division joined forces Wednesday.

Intelligence officers said the enemy in the Chinju area has taken a severe beating and suffered heavy casualties.

But the briefing officer added:

"The enemy has not lost his offensive spirit."

It was a see-saw battle along the central front, the officer reported, with the Reds pressing heaviest around Waegwan, 12 miles northwest of the key Americans communications center of Taegu.

American First Cavalry units and South Korean forces were meeting the opposition in this area.

"The whole front is still under heavy pressure," intelligence officers said. They added that the Communists apparently are aiming for a renewed attack on Taegu.

Headquarters reports said the enemy still poured troops into the embattled Changnyong bridgehead where severe fighting has raged all week.

The briefing officer also said the North Koreans have bolstered their original force of one regimental Changnyong with another regiment. It was believed that a supporting tank column was massed west of the river to add fire power to the Red thrust should a breakthrough be made.

The mass of Red troops forming along the Naktong, officers said, is the "greatest mass per mile of frontage on the entire front."

Lined up against American and South Korean troops in this area were believed to be the Red's Second, Third, Thirteenth and Fourteenth Divisions. Elements of the North Korean First Division may also be in the area, officers said.

Plan to Pool Coal, Steel Drafted; Parley Recesses

Paris, Aug. 10 (AP).—Six European nations today recessed their six-week old conference to take home to their governments a draft of a plan to pool their coal and steel.

The draft provides a complete supranational government in miniature to administer the production and marketing of coal and steel. The delegates representing France, Germany, Italy, Belgium, Luxembourg and the Netherlands, will reconvene August 31.

The draft stresses financial measures which will facilitate private and public investment in the coal and steel industries. It also emphasizes the conversion of some mines and mills to adapt them to the international pool.

U. S. Troops Rush North; Battle Rages In Pohang

Enemy Reported Within Three Miles Of Fighter Base; Chinju Still Holding

Tokyo (Friday) Aug. 11 (AP). Two fast-moving North Korean regiments today smashed to within three and a half miles of the vital United States fighter strip at Pohang on Korea's east coast. Enemy patrols jabbed to within three miles of the strip.

At the other end of the 140-mile battle line, American forces continued to grind forward toward the flaming ruins of Chinju in southwestern Korea. In this sector 1000 Communists were reported trapped as the United States infantrymen counted an advance up to 13 miles.

Pressure Mounts in North

Along the boxlike defense line this was the picture:

North—A Red column pushed 4 miles south of Yongdok on the east coast as Red pressure mounted all along the northern front defended by South Koreans.

Northwest—Allied troops isolated two separate Red forces which crossed the Naktong River near Waegwan, 12 miles northwest of Taegu.

West Central—North Koreans battled furiously to hold a mile-wide bridgehead near Changnong, about 23 miles southwest of Taegu.

Yanks Rushed to Battle

American tank-led reinforcements were rushed into the Pohang battle to bolster South Korean defenders who were surprised in a night attack.

At the front, Associated Press Correspondent Hal Boyle reported Pohang, 8 miles northwest of the airport, was in flames. Earlier dispatches told of fierce fighting in the city around the railroad station.

The Communist attack appeared well planned. Some American units moving to the front were ambushed and cut off but reportedly fought their way back to the main U. S. forces.

U. S. warplanes roared into the battle raking the enemy with rockets and machineguns while American artillery pounded the advancing force.

Great TNT Blasts To Test Sites for A-Bomb Refuges

NYHT News Service

An Army Corps of Engineers underground explosion test program to determine what types of tunnels and other subterranean refuges will withstand atomic bomb or other explosive charges was reactivated yesterday by the Department of Defense after being sidetracked two years ago because of lack of funds.

Army spokesmen said charges of TNT varying from 320 to 320,000 pounds would be used in the test program, in various soils at depths from seven to 70 feet.

They added that a 320,000-pound charge was considered equivalent in explosive power to the atom bombs dropped on Hiroshima and Nagasaki and that the data obtained could be "scaled up to the hydrogen bomb level if necessary."

The tests will be conducted at the Dugway Proving Ground near Salt Lake City; at Buckhorn, Wash., near Price, Utah; at Unaweep Canyon, near Grand Junction, Colo., and in the Cibola National Park area near Grants, N. M.

Pentagon Plans New Effort

Universal Military Training Bill to Be Back on Hill Soon

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Universal military training, an issue repeatedly shelved by Congress since World War II, will be presented soon for consideration again.

The Senate Armed Services Committee was told yesterday by Rear Adm. H. A. Houser that a new UMT bill was in the works and would be laid before Congress soon. Houser, a Defense Department spokesman, did not go into detail but it appeared the bill would be written to go into effect after the Korean crisis is ended.

Houser's revelation was in reply to a question by Committee Chairman Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.) which, in turn, referred to recent reports that a new UMT bill would be presented by the Defense Department.

Although the question of universal training has been before Congress in several forms in the last five years, neither house has yet voted on it as such. Congress in 1949 voted to transfer $800,000 earmarked for an experiment in UMT from the Army's appropriations for 1950 to the Air Force.

UMT differs from the draft in that it would apply to all young men of a certain age, and would induct them into service for a period of training, after which they would be assigned to reserve components. While in training, they would not be subject to actual combat service or, in peacetime, to service in tactical units.

The Defense Department has estimated its cost would average about two billion dollars a year, and that at least 200,000 officers and men would be needed to train the 900,000 or so youths inducted. In its previous appearances before Congress UMT has been opposed generally by labor unions, educators and some churchmen, although it was repeatedly upheld in Nation-wide opinion polls by popular majorities as high as 76 percent.

In 1946 President Truman appointed a committee headed by Dr. Karl T. Compton, which made a study and issued a report strongly urging adoption of UMT. On the basis of the report, Mr. Truman again asked Congress for UMT legislation without success.

An experiment in UMT, conducted by the Army at Fort Knox, Ky., with young volunteers, was regarded by many observers as highly successful. It did little, however, to lessen organized opposition to the program.

The Senate Armed Service Committee yesterday voted to suspend privileges of the current draft act which require that 18-year-olds be allowed to enlist for one year's service in the continental United States. This provision has been regarded by the services as impractical because one year is not considered adequate time for training a recruit in the complexities of modern warfare.

$1.5 Billion-a-Year Boost

Senate Committee Votes Hike In Corporate Income Taxes

By The Associated Press

President Truman's program for a $1,500,000,000-a-year boost in corporation taxes was approved unanimously yesterday by the Senate Finance Committee. It would raise the top levy on corporate income from 38 percent to 45, effective as of July 1, 1950.

The committee may act today on a three billion dollar increase in individual income taxes, hiking some taxpayers' burdens as much as 20 percent.

Mr. Truman told a news conference that if Congress wants to tack on, in addition, an excess-profits tax aimed at profiteering, he will sanction it.

But the President advised it would be better for Congress to consider this very controversial subject after November when it won't have election jitters. Eventually there will be an excess-profits tax, the President said.

Republicans joined with Democrats in a solid bloc behind the big corporate item in Mr. Truman's proposal for a first-installment 5 billion dollar tax hike now.

While unanimously approving the rate hike, the committee rebelled at the President's suggestion that the higher rates be made retroactive to apply to all 1950 corporation income.

The new corporation tax rate schedule will be 25 percent of the first $25,000 of corporation earnings, and 45 percent of all earnings over $25,000.

The present tax rates are 21 percent on the first $5000; 23 percent of the next $15,000; 25 percent on the next $5000; 53 percent on income between $25,000 and $50,000.

The Judge Was Icy, Too

3 Beers and an Ice Cube Skid Autoist Over Hills Into Court

A jaunt "over the Blue Ridge Mountains" in an Arlington backyard in his car Wednesday night came high for Freeman R. Hudgins, 39, in Arlington County Court yesterday.

For his weird nocturnal travels, Hudgins, a special policeman at the Pentagon, was fined $100 and given a 30-day suspended jail sentence for drunken driving by Judge Paul D. Brown. He appealed and bond was set at $500.

According to testimony given at the trial, Hudgins, who lives at 3733 S. Four Mile Run dr., Arlington, somehow managed to bowl his car into the wall of a garage at the home of William E. Marshall, jr., 863 N. Harrison st., Arlington, shortly before midnight Wednesday.

Roused by the noise of the crash, Marshall testified, he found Hudgins in his car which was rammed into the garage. Accompanying Hudgins was a dog, which was not injured. Hudgins suffered a fractured rib but was not hospitalized.

The garage wall was demolished, police said, and both the Hudgins and Marshall cars were badly damaged. Various articles in the garage also were the worse for wear after the episode.

Police reported, Hudgins was casually dressed for his hegira, wearing only shorts and a shirt when they arrived. He was barefoot.

The accident occurred, police said Hudgins reported, when his car skidded on an ice cube, hit a telephone pole and "went over the Blue Ridge Mountains."

Hudgins testified he had drunk three bottles of beer at supper-time.

Judge Brown remarked his tale was "weird" and didn't think he'd better accept it.

Wonsan Dealt Blow By 70 Superforts

Story 'Erroneous'

Air Force Denies Attack Aided Enemy

An Air Force spokesman yesterday said reports from Korea that strafing by friendly aircraft had opened a way through United States lines for North Korean troops was "completely inaccurate and erroneous."

Both air and ground commanders in Korea, the spokesman said, had stated "emphatically" that the air attacks were on their targets and that no withdrawal was made August 8 "due to United States air action." He added that air action "may have been responsible for three casualties" among American ground forces.

Reports from the front by the United Press and the Associated Press were to the effect that Air Force fighters accidentally strafed friendly troops causing them to withdrew. The Associated Press reported 19 American casualties as a result.

Tokyo, Aug. 10 (AP).—B-29 Superforts today pounded key oil and rail targets in North Korea, dropping 625 tons of bombs in the biggest air strike of the war.

Towering smoke columns rose over Wonsan, the main target, as the last bombers thundered away.

Some 70 Superforts, flying from Japan and Okinawa, went over the targets in clear weather. Little antiaircraft fire was encountered. The record load of bombs would have required 250 World War II B-17's.

One of the principal targets was the Chosen Oil Refinery at Wonsan, which is on the east coast 80 miles deep in North Korea.

It was the second air assault on the refinery. A previous strike did only slight damage.

The Far East Air Force said early reports indicated today's raid caused "extensive damage to the Communist war potential."

The refinery was capable of producing large quantities of motor fuel and aviation gas as well as lubricating oils and other petroleum products for the Communist war machine.

Other targets in the Wonsan area included the huge railroad switching center. It was filled with loaded trains when the B-29's struck. Returning crew members said flames suddenly surged across the rail yards, possibly from exploding ammunition trains.

The switching center, 25 tracks wide, handles all rail traffic moving along the east coast.

Many of the trains backed up in Wonsan were from Pyongyang, North Korean capital and rail hub, which has been the target of earlier B-29 raids.

Locomotive and car repair shops at Wonsan were blasted. North Korea's already badly crippled transportation system leaned heavily on them for repairs.

Gen. Walker Says Miracle Saved Pusan

With the U. S. Eighth Army in Korea, Aug. 10 (AP).—Pusan was saved from Red capture by a "history-making maneuver," Lieut. Gen. Walton H. Walker, Eighth Army commander, said tonight.

The North Korean Communists came within 35 miles of the east coast allied supply port before a sudden United States tactical stunt put the Americans on the offensive and set the enemy on its heels.

Walker said the maneuver was "a miracle," adding:

"If the Reds had taken Pusan we would have been destroyed. It would have been the finish."

The "history-making maneuver" to save Pusan was the shifting of the Twenty-fifth Division in two nights from the Kumchon front in the north into fighting positions in the south, east of Chinju.

The troops made the 150-mile move by motor and rail.

Walker said he felt free tonight to reveal how dangerous was the crisis and how successfully it was met.

The Twenty-fifth Division was pulled out of its battle line to the north by way of a single road exit through Kumchon.

"If the Reds had hit us hard on the Kumchon front then we couldn't have made it," Walker said.

When Maj. Gen. William B. Kean's Twenty-fifth Division started moving from the north to the south end of the battle line—across the rear of the entire fighting front—there was only the battered Nineteenth Regiment between the Sixth North Korean Division and Pusan, Walker said.

While the Twenty-fifth was on the move, Walker followed up with a planned withdrawal to the Naktong River front. The withdrawal threw the North Korean army there off balance.

Walker said he shortened the defense front to close the gap left by pulling out the Twenty-fifth Division north of Kumchon.

All this was in progress while the reinforcing Fifth Infantry Regiment and the Fifth Marine Regiment were landing at Pusan, the general said.

Walker was surprised that the Communists had not shifted more troops into the south coast drive from Chinju to exploit their own opportunity.

"They could have shifted more divisions into the drive easily," he declared. "They know I am in no position for any counteroffensive except where we have to attack to make more room west of Pusan.

"They operate in Russian style. When they are committed to a plan they stick to it no matter what. Their plan from the beginning was to drive down the Seoul-Taejon-Pusan corridor, and that's what they stuck to."

Walker said, however, the Communists had been having a hard time sticking to their plan.

Since Yongdong fell on July 25, the Americans have not been driven back, he said. Every withdrawal was deliberate and planned for such purpose as moving the Twenty-fifth from the north to the south.

"They've taken very heavy losses. Their noses have really been bloodied," the general said.

When the First Cavalry Division and the Twenty-fifth Division became available in Korea, Walker said, the Americans for the first time in the war had a chance to make an organized defense.

"Before that, poor General Dean battered his brains out throwing in pieces of this Twenty-fourth Division piecemeal. He did the best he could, the best anyone could, but he didn't have enough to do with," Walker said.

West of Yongdok, the enemy built up strong pressure on the South Koreans defending the northern rim of the boxlike defense line.

Patrols Just Outside Chinju

On the western front along the Naktong Rver, three American divisions and South Korean forces battled to contain Communist forces struggling desperately to maintain at least three footholds on the east bank of the river.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters early Friday said Communist forces were reported preparing defense positions on high ground just east of Chinju. The bomb-wrecked enemy base is 55 miles west of Pusan. United States patrols were operating virtually at the outskirts two miles east of Chinju proper.

Infantrymen of the Army's Thirty-fifth Regimental Combat Team and Fifth Infantry Regiment shoved forward under relatively light opposition. The main body was about 6 miles east of Chinju, headquarters said.

The advance of more than 13 miles was the biggest gain of the war for American troops.

Marines Mopping Up

To the southeast, Leathernecks of the Fifth Marine Regiment began mopping up an estimated 1000 or more Reds who had been cut off behind the American lines.

The Marines were cleaning out small bands north of Kosong. Occupation of Kosong, 20 air miles southeast of Chinju, secured the shores of Chinahe Gulf for the American defenders.

Elements of the battered North Korean Sixth Division pulled back so rapidly they abandoned quantities of arms and equipment.

The North Korean commanders seemed intent on letting the Sixth Division take the brunt of the south coast offensive, which kicked off five days ago.

During the week the Reds shifted their veteran First Division about 20 miles north to the Naktong River front. Here elements of the Fourth North Korean Division had forced a crossing during the night almost six days ago.

Attacked repeatedly, the Reds clung desperately to their bridgehead southwest of Changnyong, about 23 miles south of the major American supply base at Taegu.

If the Communists can break from this bridgehead they will snap the supply lines from Taegu to Pusan, 55 miles to the southeast.

Headquarters said the Reds, fighting in a mile-wide bridgehead, had been "unable to build up this force, partly because of heavy losses and partly because of extreme difficulty in crossing the river."

The Reds have Russian-made self-propelled artillery and tanks, firing from the west bank of the Naktong into American lines across the river.

Near Waegwan, 12 miles northwest of Taegu, First Cavalry Division troops contained a second band of North Koreans who penetrated the Naktong River line, MacArthur's summary said. Previous field reports, possibly later than the headquarters summary, said this enemy force was wiped out Thursday night.

Five miles farther north South Korean troops isolated a third Communist force inside their defense lines.

'Kinney's Marauders' Fight Private War

With American Troops in Korea, (Friday), Aug. 11 (AP).—Fay Kinney and his "Marauders" sounds like a band billed for a week on Broadway.

But actually "Kinney's Marauders" are a band of fighters the likes of which this Army has not seen before.

Kinney is a lanky, bespectacled second lieutenant from Oswego, N. Y. He's fast becoming a fabulous figure.

The 35th Regiment of the 25th Division needed some South Korean police to help patrol unguarded flanks. One hundred and fifty reported under a South Korean captain. They were turned over to an American captain to command. He wasn't very enthusiastic. But Kinney began taking an interest in them and before long the Korean captain was going to Kiney for orders.

And Kinney was going with the South Koreans into the enemy lines and across Red-infested mountains.

So Kinney took over command. Thus, "Kinney's Marauders."

They roamed the mountains with Kinney. They fought the enemy and whipped him.

Col. Henry G. Fisher, regimental commander, chuckled when he talked about Kinney.

"They treat him like the King of Siam," he said. "The Korean captain comes running like an orderly when Kinney whistles. And Kinney has four personal bodyguards to take care of him wherever he goes.

"Kinney lives better than any of the rest of us. Those people always bring him melons and fruit. And Kinney sees to it that his men are fed and don't get pushed around."

The Colonel believes Kinney has found the answer to how the United States Army should use South Koreans to help fight through the mountains.

"Those Koreans can go places we can't go," he said. "Why, Kinney has one man who carried a message to us by running down one mountain and across another. If I had to do that I'd still be missing this time next week."

Planes Start Strafing on Takeoff as Reds Near Field

By Hal Boyle

With American Forces at Pohang (Friday), Aug. 11 (AP).—North Korean forces drove today to within 3 miles of the vital American air base at Pohang on the Korea east coast.

Pohang itself was in flames as the fighting mounted for the airstrip southeast of the town. Forward elements of the enemy forces were within 3 miles of the field where U. S. fighters have been operating.

The bulk of the Red ground troops, however, were still 3½ miles from the field.

Tanks Spearhead Defense

United States tanks spearheaded the defense being put up by American and South Korean forces. Front reports said about two regiments of enemy troops were involved in the blazing action.

The intensity of the fighting was pointed up by the fact that two American units had been cut off in the mounting combat.

One outfit en route to reinforce defending forces was ambushed 10 miles south of Pohang last night. The unit was split in two at one time with one company separated from the rest of the troops. They regrouped, however, and later rejoined the main forces.

Another United States group guarding the sothwestern approaches to Pohang was also cut off. But the unit was left intact and, at last reports, was fighting its way back to the main elements of the defense.

Casualties appeared light among the American troops.

During the day four F-51's were lost—three by ground fire and one by a wing fire that broke out in the air—defending the base. One flier was missing in action and three were rescued.

"We started strafing the enemy before we had our wheels up after taking off," said one pilot.

The Eighth Army immediately threw in strong American and South Korean infantry support backed by tanks to check the desperate coastal drive. By mid-afternoon, one enemy force was only 60 air miles from the vital supply port of Pusan, 65 miles south of here.

The immediate aim of the Red drive appeared to be Pohang's airport itself and the rail and highway approaches to Pohang, a secondary port at which the First Cavalry Division was put ashore in a dryfooted amphibious landing about three weeks ago.

The attack from Yongdok was masked by deception, camouflage and an attempt to capitalize on the fear of Communist tanks by South Korean troops, who are alone on the Yongdok sector except for vigorous air and sea support. Yongdok is a Red-held port 25 miles north of here.

Down the coastal road from Yongdok, the Reds broke through for four miles in an area under the jurisdiction of both British and American naval guns. The Red drive rolled through partly because of superior numbers and partly through the tactics of terror.

Dummy Tanks Used

Exploiting the fear of tanks among the lightly armed Republic of Korea troops, the Communists moved lines of dummy tanks across a ridge. Then they brought down a gully four real tanks whose screaming sirens frightened the South Koreans into believing they were facing a massed armor attack.

The nerve-tearing siren and the sound of tank treads had their effect.

It was the same system of panic used by the Germans in the last World War when they put shrill noise devices in their Stuka dive bombers. But the Reds did not commit their tanks to combat. One was demobilized by a thrown tread.

The second Red push inland from Yongdok apparently was made without armor. It came down narrow inland valley corridors protected by mountains from sea or air bombardment.

Capt. Percy F. Austin of Maysville, Ky., a Korean military advisory group liaison officer with the South Koreans, estimated the invaders had about 10,000 men along a line stretching from Yongdok westward to Andong along the northeast front. This was in addition t othe enemy's veteran Fifth Division pushing through Yongdok.

Austin was the first to confirm the Red approach sifting down the inland valley. By nightfall Thursday, the Reds had penetrated in force through Kigye, northwest of Pohang, and gone 4 miles farther southward against crumbling opposition.

One 30-man patrol was throwing rifle and machinegun fire across the key supply road between Yongchon and Pohang. This roadblock was about 1000 yards east of Angang.

This was the deepest penetration and doubly dangerous because it put the Reds in position to cut the road of reinforcement and swing eastward through the hills to bring the American fighter base itself under mortar or artillery fire.

A barbed wire barrier protects the fighter strip. Men were under alert.

Austin Calls N. Korea A 'Zombie' Spearhead

Lake Success, Aug. 10 (AP).—The United States today called the North Korean regime a Russian zombie spearheading a new imperialism organized to wipe out the Republic of Korea with Russian-made tanks and guns.

The American delegate, Warren R. Austin, told the U. N. Security Council the Soviet Union could call off the North Koreans today—if they chose—and keep the war from spreading.

The Soviet Union replied with charges of "slander," but acknowledged the Russian forces sold war materiel to the North Koreans in 1948, when Moscow announced withdrawal of its occupation troops.

That was the nub of a battle of words in which the Council again got virtually nowhere in the immediate business at hand—discussion of a United States resolution to call on all nations to avoid supporting the North Koreans.

Earlier today the nine non-Communist members failed in a concerted attempt to stop what the Americans call "obstruction" of the work of the Council by Russia's Jakob A. Malik. The Council bogged down once more in procedure, with no end in sight before September 1, when Sir Gladwyn Jebb of Britain, relieves Malik as Council president.

In a 3000-word speech outlining the American stand, Austin made it clear that Washington:

1. Considers the Soviet Union responsible for the "unprovoked" attack of the North Koreans on the South.

2. Knows that the Russians and international communism could lift the fear of war from the peoples of the world if they wished to do so.

Austin took the floor after getting the nod from Washington to open a full-fledged campaign against Russian tactics and speeches in the Council. The Americans were said to feel the time has come to slap back vigorously in the verbal battle, no matter what the state of procedure in the Council.

The United States delegate accused the Soviet Union of setting up in North Korea and other countries "subservient puppet governments—zombie governments that breathe and speak and act, but have no soul."

Austin repeated his question and answer tactics of last Tuesday in insisting that the Russians could halt the North Korean war now.

Austin said the record shows the North Koreans rolled out of the mist and attacked the South Koreans with a "mighty military machine."

"This was the spearhead of the new imperialism—for the tanks and guns that hurtled out of the darkness were organized for only one purpose—to crush the independence of the Korean people and wipe out the only representative government of that country from the earth," he continued.

Austin did not in his text make the specific charge that the Russians are at this time supplying North Koreans with tanks and guns, but the United States has reported to the Security Council that the invasion was launched June 25 with Russian-made tanks and guns. Austin said the U.N. never has been able to verify that Russian troops actually withdrew from North Korea.

Malik slammed back that the Soviet Union twice has shown that the United States is the aggressor in Korea.

"The slanderous hints of the United States that the Soviet Union as a great power provides arms to North Korea are based on nothing," Malik said. He added he would make a longer statement later.

In a secret, 90-minute meeting, the nine non-Communist members tried to get Malik to "stop stalling," as some delegates put it. The word after this conference was that the nine delegations had been unsuccessful and that Malik was as adamant as ever against making a ruling on the seating of an Ambassador from South Korea at the Council table—as demanded by non-Communist delegations. When Malik called the session to order he read this statement:

"There took place an unofficial exchange of views of members of the Security Council on the questions which arose at the last meeting of the Security Council.

"As a result of this unofficial exchange of views, it has been found that the opinions of the parties remained unchanged.

"There was agreement that, as appropriate, further unofficial exchanges of views would take place."

An outburst of applause swept the crowded chamber when Alberto I. Alvarez of Cuba accused Malik of trying to lead the Council "astray and digress by reading telegrams from North Korea—which were inspired by Moscow."

Malik last Tuesday read a North Korean protest against American bombing. Alvarez insisted Malik end his "dilatory tactics" and give a ruling before the meeting adjourned—but Malik refused to do so.

French Join Germans in Pact Move

Strasbourg, France, Aug. 10 (AP). A group of French, German and Italian political leaders began a drive today to unite western Europe under a democratically-elected parliament and a common government.

Bitter over delays in the Council of Europe, 58 of the 125 members of the council's consultative assembly demanded in a resolution the immediate creation of a federal pact to that end. The pact would be open to all 15 nations represented in the assembly.

The resolution won tentative support from French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman, who describes his own project for pooling of West Europe's steel and coal industries as a step that "would rapidly develop into the political and economic unification of Europe."

Nineteen Italian political leaders signed the resolution, known to have the support of Italian Foreign Minister Carlo Sforza. Fifteen Frenchmen and 14 Germans signed, along with five Saarlanders, three Dutchmen and two Belgians.

The resolution asks member states to "conclude without delay a solemn agreement instituting a political authority" to enable the nations to "decide together, and by a majority, on a common policy with regard to the protection of human rights, external relations, economic affairs and European security."

Carlo Schmid, foreign affairs leader of the West German House, said in effect that federation would be the price for German military aid to West Europe's defenses.

Schmid, a Social Democrat, declared West Germany would contribute troops only to a "true European army under a supranational European authority," and would never build up an army outside such an authority.

Swedish Liberal Bertil Ohlin and British Laborite Ronald Mackay proposed immediate federation of those European nations favoring such a step, but pointed out Sweden and Britain are in the "go slow" category.

The Council of Europe, formed a year ago, is a sort of international parliament with highly limited powers. The committee of foreign ministers, which is the council's upper house, has veto power over assembly proposals and uses the power frequently.

Schuman outlined his coal-steel pool plan before the assembly today. He was the first foreign minister to address the assembly.

He stressed two fundamentals of the plan—the establishment of a supranational authority and the creation of a single market for coal and steel.

"It will entail an abandonment of sovereignty, a fusion of powers," he said. "I, for one, accept the principle of the renunciation of sovereignty, not as an end itself but as a necessity imposed by modern conditions."

Winston Churchill, British Conservative leader who was to have addressed the assembly today on world affairs, postponed the address until tomorrow.

West Germans To Harass Reds

Bonn, Germany, Aug. 10 (AP).—Interior ministers of 11 West German states decided today to crack down hard on Communist activity in West Germany.

They met here in conference with high officials of the West German federal government to find means of outlawing communism in West Germany. They fell short of that objective, however, because of legal difficulties.

The state interior ministers decided to:

1. Refuse interzonal travel permits for the 1500 West German delegates to the Soviet-backed "National Front" Congress in Berlin on August 25.

2. Prohibit the mass rally to be staged by the Communist Youth (FDJ) in Dortmund on September 30. The Communists recently claimed they would stage a torchlight procession of 100,000 boys and girls through Dortmund in the course of their youth rally there.

3. Ban a so-called "peace congress" in Mainz next Sunday. Also to be barred was a relay race through the state of Rhineland Pfalz in connection with the same event.

Heinemann said the ministers also agreed to joint countermeasures against Communist infiltration into the Western states.

Red German Propaganda Bomb Blows Up

Berlin, Aug. 10 (AP).—East Germany's Communist rulers bit into what looked like a juicy propaganda apple today and found it sour.

The government announced about noon it had asked the Russians for protection against the United States Air Force. It charged that American planes recently dropped two fire bombs on Soviet zone territory and the zone's air sovereignty has been violated 22 times since May.

Observers speculated that the reaction sought from Russia might mean closing of the American air corridors into Berlin and the imposition of a new blockade on the four-power city.

But three hours and 45 minutes later the official Soviet zone news agency, ADN, killed the story. So did the office of Gerhart Eisler, information chief for the East German government. Eisler's office had released the announcement for ADN.

No Explanation Given

No explanation was given for the reversal.

Western circles surmised, however, that the Russians had rapped somebody's knuckles for going too far—at least at this time.

For the Russians have never attemped to close the air corridors to Berlin. Even during their 1948-49 land blockade of the city, they never seriously challenged the Allied airlift that kept West Berliners alive.

What happened behind the scenes between the midday announcement and the afternoon "kill" remained anybody's guess.

Eiser put out the story as a formal decision of the Cabinet headed by Chancellor Otto Grotewohl, a former Socialist. Grotewohl has been leading a "hate the West" campaign.

Would Forget It All

In the withdrawal, ADN asked its subscribers, which include Western newspapers here, to consider that the original announcement "had never been carried."

Eisler and other members of the Grotewohl government teamed up in June and early July to broadcast a charge that American planes had dropped potato bugs in an effort to ruin the East German crops. Other Soviet satellites took up the charge.

United States High Commissioner John J. McCloy put the fire bomb and potato bug charges in the same category as "the Hitlerian technique of the big lie."

Naval Air Reserve Squadron Called Up

The District's only Naval air reserve patrol squadron has been called to active duty with the Atlantic Command effective September 15, it was announced yesterday.

Activation of three other units was also announced:

The 841st Order of Battle Detachment, September 3.

The 306 Armored Cavalry Group headquarters and headquarters company, September 13.

The Naval Air Reserve Patrol Squadron is the first flying outfit of any service to be activated in the Washington area.

The unit has been flying PBY planes but officials announced the squadron will not take these along to its new assignment, where it is due to get newer types of long-range patrol planes.

Strength and identification of the squadron were withheld for security reasons.

The squadron recently completed its annual two-week training tour, doing operation and anti-submarine maneuvers out of here and Norfolk.

The squadron is temporarily without a commanding officer. Its former commanding officer, Lieut. Comdr. Dan Heckerman of Glen Burnie, Md., has already been called to transport duty, in which he served during the war.

Squadron executive officer, who may take over as commanding officer, is Lieut. Comdr. Timothy G. Monahan, 1724 17th st. nw.

The PBY outfit is one of 12 squadrons at the Anacostia Air Station. A Navy official said: "We consider it our top squadron."

But one member who isn't is 55-year-old Stanley L. Potter, of 201 West Masonic View ave., Alexandria, an aviation electronics technician first class.

On the recruiting front yesterday the services reported:

Navy, 11 enlistments, 11 more applicants—four of these rejected, 7 accepted pending physicals.

Marines, 4 enlisted (including two brothers), 23 applicants, 2 accepted, 5 more "probables."

Army-Air Force—16 enlisted Army, 11 enlisted Air Force, 17 qualified to be enlisted today, 8 flunked. This is a considerably decreased rate of rejections, officials said.

Army-Trained

D. C. Doctor First in U. S. To Volunteer

A 27-year-old Washington doctor has become the first in the Nation trained at Government expense during World War II to volunteer and be commissioned since the start of the the Korean war.

Dr. Dacquisto

He is Dr. Michael Dacquisto, resident in obstetrics at Doctors Hospital.

Said the doctor: "I feel obligated."

Dr. Dacquisto is one of about 7500 doctors who were trained in Army Specialized Training Program or Navy V-12 courses during World War II without subsequent military service. The armed services have been hoping to fulfill the drastic need for doctors mainly from this group.

Navy Reports None

The Navy yesterday couldn't verify that any of this group has asked for service. The Air Force said it has received two volunteers. Their commissions are apparently still in the works.

Dr. Dacquisto gave his reasons for joining up:

"I like to feel I'm a free agent. I feel sure they will manage some sort of legislation sooner or later to compel us to join up. I feel, too, that I owe time. I feel obligated.

Dacquisto served a year in the Signal Corps, then got the equivalent of three years pre-med and one year medical school at Army expense before his discharge in 1946. He finished his medical education at his own expense at the University of Vermont.

Asked Commission July 31

He said he applied for a commission July 31. He received it this week.

Maj. Gen. Raymond W. Bliss, Army Surgeon General, in a letter to Dr. Edgar Bocock, Dictors Hospital administrator, praised the hospital for releasing Dacquisto "and otherwise supporting his decision to make himself available for service to his country."

Dr. Dacquisto did a year internship at Georgetown University Hospital before starting his two-year resident training at Doctors Hospital last month. He will report for duty at Camp Breckinridge, Ky., August 26.

Start Saturday

Guard Fliers To Train at Three Bases

All units of the District of Columbia Air National Guard will start their regular two weeks of summer field training Saturday.

Three different locations will be used for training this year.

The 121st "White House" F-84 Thunderjet Fighter Squadron will train at its home station, Andrews Base, under Lieut. Col. Willard W. Millikan, World War II ace. Detachment A, 213th Air Service Group, commanded by Maj. Robert A. Sadler, will remain at Andrews to service and maintain the squadron's aircraft.

The 113th Fighter Group Headquarters and 213th Service Group Headquarters will train at Byrd Airport, Sandston, Va., near Richmond, under Col. Laidler B. Mackall, commander of the District of Columbia Air National Guard. They will leave Andrews by motor convoy at 6 a. m. Saturday.

With them will be the 149th Fighter Squadron of the Virginia Air Guard and the 104th Squadron from Baltimore, both part of the 113th Fighter Group.

The 113th Air Control Squadron will leave Union Station at 8 a. m. on a troop train for Mitchel Air Force Base, Long Island, N. Y. The group, first air control and warning squadron in the country organized for the Air Guard, will undergo intensive training with units of the regular Air Force and other Air Guard groups from the Eastern Seaboard. Commanding officer is Maj. Arthur E. Kimberly.

U. S. Forecasts Another Bumper Harvest For Almost Every Food Crop This Year

The United States is headed toward another bumper food harvest.

The Crop Reporting Board yesterday said prospects for virtually every food crop have improved greatly since the Korean fighting started in June, as if in response to a call to arms.

Decreases from last year in several crops were attributed to Government-ordered cuts in plantings. In many cases, land taken out of crops reported yesterday were put into other uses not reported in the monthly estimates. The per acre yields in practically every instance exceed 1949.

Outstanding in the report were:

1. A record crop in domestic sugar. The estimate for sugar cane was 7,597,000 tons, compared with 6,796,000 last year and an average for ten years, 1939-48, of 5,915,000 tons.

The estimate for sugar beets, an all-time high, was 13,033,000 tons, compared with 12,526,000 last year and a 10-year average of 10,197,000 tons.

2. Wheat jumped 40 million bushels above the July forecast. Yesterday's forecast was for almost a billion bushels (996 million). The report predicted a yield of 16.5 bushels an acre, compared with an average of only 14.9 last year.

3. An all-time high of 271 million bushels was forecast for soybeans, an important element in margarine, soaps, cooking fats and oils, compared with 222 million bushels last year. It is 48 million bushels greater than the 1948 crop, the previous record.

4. Prospects for most summer vegetables improved. Total yields now are expected to be 4 percent above last year and 7 percent above the 10-year average. Increases are predicted in onions, watermelons, cabbage, lettuce, snap beans, lima beans, carrots and cauliflower. Sharpest reductions from last year are expected in tomatoes and celery.

5. In spite of the fact that price supports for potatoes have been removed in many States, prospects are for one of the largest crops in history. The average per acre yield is expected to be an amazing 223 bushels—7 bushels above the previous record in 1948. The average per acre yield was 110 bushels in 1930 and 132 bushels in 1941.

Agriculture Secretary Charles F. Brannan recently predicted price supports for potatoes, even on the limited basis this year, will cost 75 million dollars.

Particular interest was displayed in the soybean estimate. Recent speculation in soybeans has sent the price skyrocketing more than $1 a bushel to around $2.50. Yesterday's forecast of a record crop—almost 50 million bushels, or 20 percent above the previous high—was not altogether unexpected. Today's soybean market will get unusual attention to see the effect the forecast has on prices.

The Agriculture Department has not yet set a price support level for this year's soybean crop. If set, it would be far below the present market. One reason for the delay, it was reported, was that Brannan feared any such announcement might "break" the market, and he did not wish to assume the blame for bringing about a market drop that many expect bound to come soon, anyway.

Only two crops indicated a drop since the July estimate, and both declines were minor. Corn prospects dropped seven million bushels to 3167 million, and dry edible beans—the kind the Army eats—about 300,000 to 16,733,000 bushels.

All the rest improved over July.

Two months ago an optimistic report like yesterday's would have been received in some quarters with misgivings. It would have meant more surpluses for the Government to buy under the prices support program.

Officials were happy yesterday to realize that wheat prospects now are sufficient to meet all domestic needs plus export requirements.

Reports from Canada indicate a record or near-record wheat crop. The two North American countries can meet all foreign demands, in case of emergency. If peace is restored, it may mean a cat-and-dog fight between this country and Canada for the world's export markets.

Improved hay and pasturage indicated plenty of food for the dairy industry. In July, the report stated, milk production was 2 percent above July 1949, from fewer cows. The number of milk cows was the lowest for July since 1930, yet more milk was produced except for three banner years, 1945, 1946 and 1947, when the number of dairy cows reached all-time peaks.

Egg production was 7 percent above last July. Prices for both eggs and chickens have risen recently, the report said, but still are below last year.

Here's what the report had to say about crops in nearby areas:

"Production of Maryland tobacco is indicated at 36.8 million pounds compared with 41 million in 1949. The Maryland crop is even more variable than usual. Planting was not completed in all cases until after July 1, resulting in fields at all stages of development. While the crop is generally late, it made better than normal progress during July."

Tobacco prospects declined sharply in West Virginia, but "marked improvement took place in Virginia."

APPLES: "The commercial apple crop is estimated at 118 million bushels, or 12 percent less than last year, but 8 percent above average.

"All regions are below last year except the South Atlantic States, where the Virginias have very good prospects. The Maryland crop is larger than last year, but below average."

PEACHES: "The Middle Atlantic States, Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland, Delaware, New Jersey and Pennsylvania, have an estimated total of 6,072,000 bushels—23 percent below last year and 4 percent below average. The season is about a week later than usual in this area. Size and quality are indicated good.

"The Virginia crop at 981,000 bushels is about three-fifths of average. George Belle and Elberta were ready for harvest in southern Virginia counties by August 5 and should be moving in volume in northern counties by August 15 to 20."

CORN: Prospects improved in States near Washington in contrast to declines in other States. Maryland production was estimated at 17,822,000 bushels compared with 16,884,000 a month ago; Virginia had increased to 52,499,000 bushels compared with 50,265,000 in July; and West Virginia had gone up to 10,101,000 bushels from 9,842,000 a month ago.

Prospects for other small grains were virtually the same as a month ago, with only slight improvement in rye and oats.

D. C. Food Up 2.4% Since Korea Crisis

Retail food prices in Washington increased .9 percent during the last two weeks of July and at the end of the month stood 2.4 per cent higher than before the Korean fighting.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics reported at the same time that retail food prices nationally declined slightly during the last two weeks of July.

But food prices nationally stood 2.7 percent higher on July 31 than on June 15.

The bureau made a survey of 25 food items in 13 cities on July 31. The spot study was made because of congressional action on possible price control in view of the Korean crisis.

The national decline, from July 15 to July 31, amounting to only .02 percent, was attributed largely to the seasonal decline in the price of fresh vegetables. Tomatoes, for instance, were down 50 percent from June 15.

In Washington sugar led the way with a 9.8 percent increase from June 15 to July 31, the BLS reported. Egg prices were up 8.3 percent. Bacon was up 7.5 percent to an average of 87.3 cents a pound. Coffee was up 7.1 percent to 83.3 cents a pound. Bread was up 6.1 percent to 13.9 cents a pound, and hamburger averaged 61 cents a pound on July 31, an increase of 4.5 percent over June 15.

Smaller price increases were recorded in round steaks, fish, butter, delivered milk, and bananas.

Veal cutlets decreased 4.5 percent in price during the six week period to an average of 113.4 cents per pound, still high to the housewives of Washington. Pork chops also decreased, 1.1 percent.

The bureau estimated that the retail food price index for 56 large cities on July 31, was 212 percent of the 1935-1939 average.

'Chinese' Traders Hit As 'Heavy Speculators'

Secretary of Agriculture Brannan said yesterday traders with "Chinese names" have been "heavy speculators" in the recent runaway soybean futures market in this country.

Their trading, together with that of other traders, he said, has been "irresponsible speculation."

Brannan did not disclose names of the Chinese traders, some of whom were said to be located in Hongkong. But aides said he would be gladly do so if asked by a congressional committee.

Brannan said there was no evidence of any violation of laws or regulations covering commodity trading.

Rather, he said, the trading was "another example of the classical 'speculative splurge' in which a large unmber of speculative accounts enter the market, and by their feverish activity aggravate and accentuate the basic price trend."

Gillette Says Food Profiteers and Hoarders Are 'Daring Congress to Slap on Controls'

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Senator Guy M. Gillette (D., Iowa) yesterday blasted profiteers in the food industry and hoarders for doing "exactly what our enemies want us to do."

Gillette's outburst before the Agriculture subcommittee on utilization of farm crops, which he heads, was matched later by an attack by Charles W. Holman, National Milk Producers' official, on the Government's butter and milk purchases under the price support laws.

Gillette charged that profiteers in the "processing, wholesaling and retailing food trades" are "daring Congress to slap on controls."

"Certainly no one is hoarding bread," he declared, "yet prices have advanced from 1 to 3 cents a loaf; or milk, which has gone up a cent a quart or more, or gasoline and fuel oil, which have advanced in price.

"Few people could hoard coffee at current prices; any hoarding in this instance is by the coffee producers withholding coffee in the hope of still higher prices.

"Ingredients of oleomargarine have advanced but little, yet since repeal of the tax by Congress retail margarine prices have risen rapidly."

The Iowan interrupted his blast at food dealers long enough to express the hope that his committee can soon take up the study of the wide spreads between the prices farmers get for their products and the prices charged consumers. As an example of how that spread is increasing, he declared:

"Profiteers have taken advantage of the war situation by erasing the markings on canned goods and substituting higher prices. Consumers everywhere are reporting cases of two and three price rises on various items while the merchandise was still on the store shelves."

Gillette read several telegrams from constituents complaining about inability to get sugar. The complaints alleged that two big Midwest beet sugar companies are refusing to fill orders, even for old-time customers.

W. J. McDonald of the Grapette Bottling Co., Burlington, Ia., wired Gillette that "the brokers and wholesalers with whom I have dealt in the past all have informed me that there is no question but that both the Amalgamated Sugar Co. and Great Western Sugar Co., are refusing to ship until they can obtain a higher price. This even though I am paying $1 more per hundredweight than three weeks ago."

"With the abundance which nature has provided this country there is plenty of food for all," Gillette declared. "There is no need for slapping on controls if only the processors and distributors of food products will exercise restraint in their pricing and the consumers a similar restraint in their purchasing."

Gillette made public a pledge titled "This firm belongs to the We Will Not Profiteer Club," which he urged food distributors to sign "and post prominently."

Holman charged that "large amounts of the finest butter" did not enter the butter merchandising "due to the Government procurement methods."

Instead of being a price-support system, he said, the butter program put the Government in competition with the butter industry.

Instead of fixing a butter price that varied with relation to transportation costs, the Agriculture Department, he said, maintained one price in all sections of the country. This, Holman said, "cut directly across the merchandising system."

Holman also opposed a universal compulsory milk sanitation code as urged by the Public Health Service.

Middies, Cadets Ready for 'D-Day' Beach Assaults

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 10 (AP).—Naval Academy Midshipmen and West Point Cadets, off Friday for two weeks of amphibious operations, are girding themselves for a "D-Day" assault on beaches scheduled to be defended by a battalion of United States Marines.

This is the fifth consecutive year that cadets and midshipmen have been grouped together for amphibious training with the assault on Marine-manned beaches as the climax.

The attack transport Bayfield will take on 800 midshipmen and approximately 600 cadets and set a course for Little Creek, Va. There the future officers will study all phases of amphibious operations, including amphibious landing procedures, rope-net debarking down ships' sides, the effects of aerial support during actual landings and shore bombardments by naval batteries.

Washington Was Asleep In Korea . . . Let's Not Sleep in the Atlantic

Washington was asleep in Korea.

It is still sleeping in the North Atlantic, the very citadel of freedom, still dreaming that mere alliance will suffice. For this blunder we shall pay with more than blood, if we do not soon come to our senses, and add union to alliance.

George Washington would be appalled to find his name identified with faith in an alliance, instead of federal union of democratic people. In his Farewell Address he advised:

> "To the efficacy and permanency of your Union, a government for the whole is indispensable.
> "No alliance, however strict, between the parts can be an adequate substitute; they must inevitably experience the infractions and interruptions which all alliances in all times have experienced. Sensible to this momentous truth, you have improved upon your first essay [the alliance the 13 States formed in the Articles of Confederation], by the adoption of a constitution of government . . ."

George Washington did not trust alliance even among our 13 States. He saw it break down even there. Yet the U. S. dreams today of a feebler alliance working across the Atlantic. George Washington held a Union government "indispensable" even for our 13 States. But the U. S. dreams of dispensing with a Union government now among democracies that face a fiercer foe.

Doubters ask if a common government can be made for so large an area as the Atlantic community . . . in this electric-jet-atomic age. In his Farewell Address George Washington answered them with this plea to those who doubted that a Union from the Atlantic to the Mississippi could succeed in the oxcart era:

> "Is there a doubt whether a common government can embrace so large a sphere? Let experience solve it. To listen to mere speculation in such a case were criminal. We are authorized to hope that a proper organization . . . will afford a happy issue to the experiment. It is well worth a full and fair experiment."

How much longer will the U. S. continue to indulge in mere speculation, refuse even to call a convention to explore Atlantic Union? Why wait longer for worse catastrophe to prove the folly of present U. S. policy and the wisdom of George Washington? Alliance can help, but it is not enough.

Alliance Cannot Save Us—Atlantic Union Can

Is there anything in the Atlantic Pact to make it work where all other alliances failed? In the current issue of Freedom & Union its editor, Clarence Streit, answers No. In an article titled:

Balanced Atlantic Forces —Another Maginot Blunder

he shows why the Atlantic alliance is, if anything, more unreliable than other alliances.

Who has veto power in the Atlantic Pact?

What is its voting procedure?

Can its Council act, or only recommend?

Perhaps you awoke too late to the importance of similar questions with regard to the U. N. Why awake too late as regards the Atlantic Pact? To know the answers now read Streit's article.

You are reading in the press of the billions the U. S. plans to spend rearming its Atlantic allies . . none too soon. But have you read what protection the alliance gives against these arms being lost to the communists by a coup — as in Czechoslovakia? You can read of this in current Freedom & Union and find, on page 3, Secretary Acheson's answer to the Senate.

Read in Freedom & Union

Canadian Senate Votes Atlantic Union
Three days after the Korean attack, the Canadian Senate passed with only one negative vote a resolution calling for a Convention of the Atlantic Pact sponsors to explore how far they can federate within the framework of the U. N. It is practically the same as the Atlantic Union resolution that Senator Kefauver, Rep. Wadsworth and others introduced a year ago in Congress, where it is still in committee. The daily press ignored Canada's historic action, but you can read the details in Freedom & Union—whose wide readership in Ottawa, Canadian Senators say, helped produce it.

How Would Atlantic Union Affect U. S. Economy?
Would it level our living standard down to Europe's—or raise it to new heights, enable it to carry the burden of rearming without bankruptcy winning for Stalin? How many workers would face keener competition if Atlantic Union were made? How many would directly profit from it? How would it affect your own job? These and many other questions are answered in this research report by Louis Domeratzky, retired bureau chief of the Commerce Department, with facts and figures.

Letter From Iron Curtainland
This smuggled-out report from a reader of Freedom & Union in Hungary tells of the state of mind and conditions generally in the vital country where the Red Army is posted on the flank of Tito—who may be the next to be attacked. Can we count on revolt in Iron Curtainland? Would Atlantic Union help? Read this rare report for the answers.

Read these and other articles in the current Freedom & Union

Another thing: Just before the Korean aggression, Secretary Acheson came out for the Atlantic Council's recommendation that we base our Atlantic defenses on "the principle of balanced collective forces." This means each ally would tend to specialize—the U. S. in atomic, air and naval arms, the British in tactical aviation and navy, the French in land forces.

In his article Streit tells why this principles is "as illusory as was the Maginot Line concept" and "liable to end in worse disaster to us than the China policy, if it is not treated as a mere stopgap pending the creation of an Atlantic federal union." He writes:

"The main reason why it makes the alliance still more unreliable is that it gives the military task that men seek most to escape—the infantry—to the men whose morale is most likely to be undermined by this assignment.

"The French infantry paid heavily for its valor at Verdun and elsewhere in World War I. The French losses were far heavier than Britain's, to say nothing of America's. Disregarding this, the next Anglo-French alliance prepared for the second war by having the French provide the bulk of the land force while the British specialized in sea and air weapons. The Nazis, however, did not disregard this psychological factor. They spread word among the French that 'Britain would again fight to the last Frenchman.'

"When the French caved in, they could see, in the great armies that not only Britain but the U. S. then proceeded to raise, how much both had been depending on the French to do the worst of the soldiering and most of the dying for them. It would be folly to think that the ordinary Frenchman will forget this. Nor will Communist Russia disregard this human factor as our military chiefs seem to be doing. [Remember how badly they over-estimated South Korean morale.]

"Imagine organizing the defense of the U. S. on a basis of state specialization: The Californians and Texans manning the navy, the New Yorkers and New Englanders supplying the fliers, and the job of slogging through the mud in the infantry being left to the boys of Illinois and other midwestern states. Who could get elected to Congress from the Midwest on that platform? Could the devil himself invent a better plan for undermining morale in the U. S. and dividing state against state?

"The talk of meeting the difficulty by new weapons that reduce the number of men needed in the infantry is no answer * * * [This was written before Korea showed this answer's hollowness.]

"There is only one sound answer . . . . the answer followed in the 48 States—that of forming a federal union, with a common army, air and naval force whose men are drawn indiscriminately from all the states for all the services. This solution knits people together wondrously, as the other divides them diabolically. * * *

"The Atlantic democracies cannot, of course, form such a federal union . . . quickly. And because they cannot achieve it quickly, they urgently need to begin the process now, by calling the proposed Atlantic Federal Convention."

Read the rest in current Freedom & Union.

When the Kremlin was blockading Berlin and attention here was centered on the Atlantic side, Freedom & Union warned in February, 1949, of the weakness of democracy's defenses in the Far East, the danger of Stalin shifting his pressure from Berlin to Asia. Today, while attention centers on Asia, Freedom & Union warns that our Atlantic defenses are still based on a blunder.

Since the Korean attack, Secretary Acheson has shown a wise willingness to reconsider policy and adapt it to new conditions. This gives hope that he will now see the weakness in alliance and the urgent need of calling at least a Convention to explore Atlantic Union. To block even this is to take a grave responsibility . . . a responsibility that each citizen now faces, too, for himself.

Nearly 1700 Out in Strike At Oak Ridge

Oak Ridge, Tenn., Aug. 10 (U.P.)—The first war production strike of the Korean crisis pulled nearly 1700 men off vital atomic projects today, cutting into a work schedule accelerated for the preparedness effort.

A statement by the Atomic Energy Commission branded the walkout as "unauthorized" and substantiated earlier reports that it was touched off by 75 AFL painters who were "dissatisfied with their superintendent.'

Hundreds of members of other AFL trades refused to cross the picket lines pending a check with their local officers, and within a few hours the third general walkout at Oak Ridge within 12 months was on.

Only 670 of approximately 2000 manual workers on the day shift reported for work to the Maxon Construction Co., builders of two big plants for separation of the atom bomb component, uranium-235, the AEC said.

Of an expected 500 on the afternoon shift, the commission said, only 146 were working.

The commission said the strike resulted from an "unauthorized picket line" established by the painters at three of the six main gates to the atomic city.

Nation-Wide Walkout In Meat Firms Looms

Chicago, Aug. 10 (U.P.)—The possibility of a Nation-wide strike against major meat packers loomed today as CIO and AFL unions reported mounting rank-and-file pressure for a showdown on expiring contracts.

Contracts covering about 120,000 employes of Armour & Co., Swift & Co., Wilson & Co., and Cudahy Packing Co. expire at midnight Friday.

Negotiations were in stalemate after the two unions, the CIO United Packinghouse Workers of America and the AFL Amalgamated Meat Cutters, rejected an offer by Armour for an 8-cent hourly wage increase.

Spokesmen for both unions said there has been heavy rank-and-file "pressure" against extending the contracts.

Trial of 21 Dissidents Urged in Guild Strike

New York, Aug. 10 (U.P.)—A fact-finding committee of the New York Newspaper Guild tonight recommended that a group of World Telegram and Sun employes demanding a quick end to the Guild strike against the newspaper be tried on five charges of violating the Guild constitution.

The committee recommended that 21 of the group calling itself the Guild Committee for Common Sense be tried for disobeying Guild orders, acting collusively with management, giving management confidential information, forming an organization to defeat collective bargaining and acting to circumvent collective bargain.

All 23 members of the dissident group were ordered to appear before the fact-finding committee, but only two answered the Guild's call. They were excepted from the recommendation for trial.

The group had been ordered to explain charges that continuation of the strike was against the wishes of the rank and file. It also accused the Guild of "tyrannical methods."

'Gas' Stations In Jersey End Closedown

Trenton, N. J., Aug. 10 (U.P.)—The protest closedown of independent gasoline stations in New Jersey because of a price war was ended tonight after a conference in the Statehouse.

Gov. Alfred E. Driscoll made the announcement of an agreement ending the two-day shutdown that had spread to 4000 gasoline stations following a 3-hour meeting between John Dressler, president of the State Gasoline Dealers Association, and State Treasurer Walter T. Margetts.

The stations will reopen at once, Driscoll said.

Under the agreement, a "study committee" will be appointed to consider the dispute which began when the independent gas dealers charged that a large producer cut prices, forcing small dealers to sell their gas cheaper and take smaller profits.

The independent dealers said their protest action against the gas war, which sent prices plummeting almost 5 cents a gallon, had closed 80 percent of the stations in 11 of the State's most populous counties. The stations normally serve about one million motorists.

Nine pickets were arrested in southern New Jersey yesterday and last night while 13 others were seized, taken to police headquarters and released after a warning against violence in attempts to close stations.

The retail operators contended they needed a 5-to-6-cent-a-gallon profit margin "to make a living" and that the price war had cut their profits to 3 to 4 cents a gallon.

12 Greek Reds to Die For Murder Plot

Athens, Greece, Friday, Aug. 11 (U.P.)—Twelve Communists were sentenced to death by a court martial for plotting to murder United States Lieut. Gen. James A. van Fleet and a dozen top Greek political figures, it was disclosed today.

Van Fleet headed the United States military mission to Greece and recently returned safely to the United States.

The assassination plots were admitted by two of the defendants

New Senate Bill Combines Six Anti-Subversive Measures

By the United Press

Chairman Pat McCarran (D., Nev.), of the Senate Judiciary Committee, yesterday introduced a sweeping Communist-control bill that wraps into one package a half-dozen measures to curb subversive activities.

McCarran described it as his version of legislation needed to carry out President Truman's anti-Communist proposals. Senate Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.), commended McCarran for drafting the bill, but reserved "the right to take a look at it."

Senators Ferguson (R., Mich.), and Mundt (R., S. Dak.), said they will support McCarran's bill, although Mundt contended it was "stolen" from the Mundt-Ferguson-Johnston Communist-control measure.

"It took our bill lock, stock and barrel with a couple of changes so minute it takes a fellow with a sea-going microscope to find 'em," he said.

The McCarran bill is a combination of six bills before Congress.

1. The Mundt-Ferguson bill to require registration of Communists and Communist-front organizations; outlaw conspiracies to establish a foreign-dominated dictatorship in the United States; withhold Federal jobs and passports from Communists, and require Communists to label their propaganda.

2. An alien control bill to authorize the Justice Department to withdraw diplomatic privileges from lesser diplomats and lower-echelon United Nations employes found guilty of subversion or espionage. In addition, it would suspend immigrations quotas of countries refusing to accept their nationals when ordered deported.

3. A measure to permit the Attorney General to retain in custody aliens who have been ordered deported but who cannot be for technical reasons.

4. A Justice Department-sponsored measure to require registration of all foreign-trained spies.

5. A bill to establish a semi-independent bureau of visas and passports in the State Department.

6. A bill to ban picketing of Federal Court buildings or the residences of Federal judges or jurors.

In addition, the McCarran measure would provide the first specific ban against naturalization of Communists. In the past, they have been excluded on the theory they advocate overthrow of the Government by force.

Other provisions of the bill are designed to plug technical loopholes in the espionage and immigration laws.

While McCarran said his measure was intended to carry out Mr. Truman's proposals, the bill actually goes much further.

Mr. Truman has called for extension of the statute of limitations on peacetime espionage cases; power to tighten security in defense areas; registration of Russian-trained spies and saboteurs, and a closer check on subversive aliens who cannot be deported.

U. S. Advances In Production Of A-Bomb Ore

By the United Press

Domestic uranium mining has been stepped up to the point where this country now is producing more of its own A-bomb raw material than it buy from Canada, it was disclosed yesterday.

Chairman Brien McMahon (D., Conn.) of the Congressional Atomic Energy Committee reported the achievement, but withheld production details for security reasons.

He said the bulk of the uranium ore still comes from the Belgian Congo, but that northern Canada is no longer the second most important source.

The increased domestic supply is of great importance, McMahon indicated, because expansion of United States A-bomb production is closely tied to the availability of more raw materials.

He implied this country already is producing atomic explosives at the maximum rate possible with existing raw materials.

He flatly denied reports his committee has "ordered" the Atomic Energy Commission to step up A-bomb production through a 500 million-dollar plant expansion program.

He said he does "anticipate a further expansion," but "I cannot say at this time whether it will occur in this calendar year."

The Commission, McMahon said, is "interested in maximum production and so are we. It requires no order to attain that end."

He added that "dollars also are unimportant in this matter"—indicating the raw material supply is the big hurdle.

The AEC has been pressing a search for new domestic uranium sources, and in its july report to Congress it said the campaign is yielding promising results.

Production of relatively low-grade carnotite uranium ores on the Colorado plateau has been sharply increased, and improved processing facilities have made it easier and cheaper to use these ores.

In addition, there are hopeful indications that rich pitchblende deposits may be found in upper Michigan and near Marysville, Utah.

G-E Removes Limitation On $125-a-Month Pension Plan

New York, Aug. 10 (AP)—The General Electric Co. today offered a minimum $125 a month pension to full-time employes with 25 years of service at normal retirement age.

The plan would be contributory on the part of employes and would include Social Security benefits.

The company made the offer during contract negotiations with unions representing its 160,000 employes. The unions did not act on the proposal immediately.

Union negotiators had asked a $125 monthly pension, without employe contributions, a 10-percent wage increase and other benefits.

The company announced a 3 percent wage increase during the talks. Union negotiators accepted the increase but said they would insist on it being hiked further. Present wage rates were not announced.

General Electric previously had offered a $125 minimum pension with the limitation that, if this were more than half of the worker's monthly pay, he would receive an amount equal to only half of his pay.

Today's offer removed this limitation.

The huge electrical manufacturing company also proposed today, because of "uncertain economic conditions ahead of us," that contracts now being negotiated permit reopening of wage talks after six months.

Stressing that its proposed $125 pension was a minimum, the company said in a memo to its various plant managers today that it would increase as "pay and length of service go up."

"An employe averaging $75 a week for 25 years would, with presently proposed Social Security, get about $153 a month; for 30 years, $167, for 40 years, $196," the memo said.

The biggest of these are the CIO International Union of Electrical Workers in 49 plants and the United Electrical Workers, an independent group, in 40 plants.

There has been no strike, but the CIO group recently called upon employes of all General Electric's plants to take a vote to authorize a strike as of August 21 if an agreement is not reached by that time.

Sen. Taylor, Trailing by 1161 Votes, Refuses To Concede Defeat in Bid for Renomination

Boise, Idaho, Aug. 10 (AP).—Senator Glen H. Taylor (D., Idaho), refused today to admit defeat in his bid for renomination. He still hoped the primary election tide would shift in his favor.

Unofficial returns from Tuesday's balloting gave 25,600 votes to Taylor, vice presidential candidate on Henry A. Wallace's Progressive Party ticket in 1948. Former Democratic Senator D. Worth Clark, attempting a comeback, polled 26,761 votes, and Representative Compton I. White received 14,523. The count included returns from 810 of the State's 839 precincts.

Although Taylor trailed by only 1161 votes, the missing precincts were too small to alter the outcome, on the basis of unofficial counting. Clark was ousted from office by Taylor in 1944.

Taylor issued this statement from his home in Pocatello:

"If and when it is definitely established that Mr. Clark has won the primary election, I shall be most happy to concede and offer my congratulations. But with the race so close and with so many candidates on the ballot, increasing the possibility of error in the count, I hope no one will accuse me of poor sportsmanship if I wait until the results have been announced officially."

The official canvass begins August 19.

Unofficial winner of the Republican nomination for the six-year Senate term was State Senator Herman Walker.

Senator Henry C. Dworshak won the Republican nomination for the four-year unexpired Senate term. Claude J. Burtenshaw, a political science professor, apparently won the Democratic nomination.

Carpenter Concedes In Nebraska Primary

Omaha, Aug. 10 (AP).—Terry Carpenter of Scottsbluff today conceded nomination of Walter R. Raecke as Democratic candidate for Governor.

Although he was trailing by less than 1200 votes in virtually complete unofficial returns, Carpenter sent Raecke a telegram congratulating the 54-year-old Central City attorney and former legislator on "your splendid victory."

Raecke will oppose two-term Republican Governor Val Peterson easy winner over two opponents in Tuesday's primary.

Dogs in County To Get Free Shots

A free rabies vaccination clinic for dogs will be held Saturday from 9 a. m. to 11 a. m. at the Silver Spring National Guard Armory.

The clinic will be held under auspices of the county health department and the Department of Inspection and Licenses and is the last one scheduled for the Silver Spring area before next May. A clinic is planned for Bethesda at a later date and also in the upper end of the county.

Two veterinarians and personnel from the two sponsoring agencies will be present.

Under the new dog law recently enacted by the County Council, dogs which have not been vaccinated before June 30 must be kept confined. They may run loose when they are vaccinated.

Decade Sees Dwellings Double In Two Neighboring Counties

Dwelling units in both Prince Georges and Montgomery counties more than doubled in number during the past 10 years, according to preliminary figures released by the Census Bureau.

Prince Georges County boomed from 22,348 units in 1940 to 54,673 in 1950, a growth of 144 percent, showing the builders have apparently kept ahead of the population growth, which amounted to 117 percent.

In Montgomery County, where population rose about 95 percent, dwelling units increased 103 percent, or from 23,255 to 47,342 in the decade.

Figures for individual towns, showing the number of dwelling units in 1950 compared with 1940, were: Rockville, 1887 (503); Takoma Park, 4028 (2494); College Park, 2274 (not enumerated in 1940); Greenbelt, 1895 (833); Hyattsville, 3577 (1748); Mt. Rainier, 3678 (1361), and Riverdale, 1522 (639).

Totals for other nearby Maryland counties were: Calvert, 4830 (4252); Charles, 6408 (4306); Frederick, 17,282 (14,674); St. Marys, 7007 (3593), and Washington, 23,385 (18,351).

2 German Students Will Live In Silver Spring for a Year

Montgomery Blair High School, Silver Spring, Md., will welcome into its classes next month a boy and girl from Germany, both 17 years old, under a program sponsored by the American Field Service International Scholarship.

It is the only Montgomery County public school selected by AFS for placement of the foreign students. The Student Council unanimously approved of the idea when Daryl Shaw, principal, left it up to the group to decide, he said yesterday.

The AFS is a voluntary organization supported by public subscription with 3500 members in this country. A group of nearly 50 will be placed in schools throughout the country for a year's course.

One problem that had to be solved before the school could accept the youths was their placement in Silver Spring homes. It was finally done through the efforts of Frank McNaughton, P-TA president, and Mrs. Eugene A. Burr, a member of the executive committee. The sponsors asked that the youths stay with families of their own faiths and that the families take them in as one of their own—to live and eat with the family circle. Each family will receive a dollar a day for the students.

With the aid of the Rev. Robert E. Lee, pastor of the St. Luke Lutheran Church, and the Rev. Joseph A. Deppe, pastor of St. Michael's Catholic Church, the suitable families were found.

The boy, Heinz Erich Munnich, will stay with Mr. and Mrs. John A. Troxler and family, 117 Normandy dr. Troxler is in the road contracting business.

The girl, Dagmar Anna Sabathil, will live with Mr. and Mrs. Joseph K. Herzig, 726 Thayer ave. Herzig is employed at the Sulgrave club.

Woman on Rail Flier Slain in Rape Attack

Douglas, Ariz., Aug. 10 (U.P.).—A former railroad worker tried to rape a 60-year-old woman on the Southern Pacific's Golden State Limited as the train sped through Arizona today and strangled her when she resisted.

Harold T. Lantz, 28, of Tucson, Ariz., confessed to the lower-berth murder of Miss Ada C. Park of Grinnell, Iowa, after drinking "two quarts of tequila in Tucson."

Miss Prk

Lantz

Lantz, his face streaming with blood from deep scratches he received in the death struggle, at first claimed he had been injured trying to capture the killer.

He ran through the train screaming, "Someone just killed a woman and jumped off the train," Conductor T. S. Bryan said. Bryan became suspicious and telephoned ahead to police to meet the train.

The death car was detached from the train at Douglas while police questioned the passengers. Lantz finally confessed to Sheriff I. V. Pruitt in his way to the police station.

He said he had been drinking after he Southern Pacific fired him from his bridge carpenter's job "because of my record."

He told police he "just stepped aboard" the eastbound train when it stopped at Tucson and then climbed into the lower berth with Miss Park with the intention of "raping her."

"She awakened and screamed," he said. "I clapped my hand over her mouth and she began to fight. She clawed and kicked and before I knew what I had done, I had choked her."

He said he stayed there for two hours figuring out what to do.

The berth was torn and ripped from the woman's furious struggle with the 6-foot, 185-pound Lantz, the conductor said.

Lantz said he had received a dishonorable discharge from the Army, the Associated Press reported. He was a native of Richwood, W. Va.

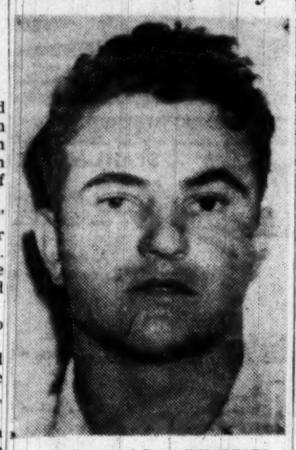
Wife Shot in Abdomen Gives Birth to Baby

Greencastle, Ind., Aug. 10 (AP).—A 22-year-old Roachdale woman gave birth to a baby in Putnam County Hospital last night two hours after she had been shot accidentally in the abdomen.

The baby was reported in good condition, but the mother was in fair condition at the hospital today.

The woman, Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Hennon, was at the home of her father-in-law, Ray C. Hennon, with her husband, Reed, 22. The father-in-law said the two men had been fishing and had returned home with a .22 caliber pistol they had been using for target practice. He said the gun was discharged accidentally.

Md. Speeder Held In Bank Robbery



Associated Press WIREPHOTO

JOSEPH NOLEN,

24, of Corbitt, Ky., is being held in Baltimore, Md., pending his removal to Ohio on a charge of participating in a $35,000 Cincinnati bank holdup. Nolen was arrested by Maryland State police for doing 75 miles an hour on U. S. Route 1, near Fullerton, Md. A search of his car revealed two revolvers. A check with the FBI disclosed he was one of a trio of brothers wanted for questioning in the bank robbery. The FBI said that a search of his Germantown, Pa., apartment turned up $3680 in a vacuum cleaner bag. Last night authorities announced the arrests of his brothers, John and Ballard in Rocky Ford, Colo.

Errol Flynn Discovers Kansas as Oil Spouts

Salina, Kan., Aug. 10 (AP).—Film hero Errol Flynn found Kansas today, but those Kansans who cared had a hard time finding him.

It was late in the day before Salinans got a real life glimpse of the 40-year-old actor, who came here for a visit with Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Wymore, parents of his bride-to-be, Actress Patrice Wymore.

Flynn remained in bed most of the morning. He and Miss Wymore spent the night at the home of her grandmother, Mrs. Emma Catlin. They didn't leave there until about 11:30 a. m., when they walked to the apartment of her parents five blocks away.

The film couple arrived in Salina late last night after a flight from Los Angeles. At Wichita, where their plane landed, Flynn told reporters he was "very anxious to see Kansas and meet Kansas people." He said he never was good at geography and until Miss Wymore showed him on a map he "didn't have the slightest idea where Kansas was."

He found out today.

One of the things he learned—that is, if he never knew it before—was that Kansas produces oil. An oil well came in on his future father-in-law's holdings near here today.

Baby, 1½ Lbs., Fights 20 to 1 Odds on Living

Coral Gables, Fla., Aug. 10 (U.P.). A baby weighing one-and-a-half pounds and measuring a little longer than a telephone receiver battled 20 to one odds to live today.

Doctors have kept Carol Ann Kelly in an incubator since she was born three days ago, three months prematurely. She measured nine-and-a-half inches when born.

Physicians said 20 babies like her die for every one who survives. But they said the fact that Carol Ann is comparatively healthy is in her favor. She is fed with a medicine dropper.

New Twist To Old Game Backfires

A new twist to the old, old three-card monte game failed to keep its suspected sponsors from behind bars.

As a result, three suspected flim-flam artists, two of them brothers, were held in bond totaling $25,000 yesterday.

They were James Wells, 42, of 457 Massachusetts ave. nw., held in $7500 bond; his brother, Charles Wells, 36, of 608 Kenilworth ter. ne., $10,000 bond, and Arthur Beards, 42, of 1015 8th st. nw., $7500.

Described as veteran con artists by Lieut. Edgar E. Scott, head of the robbery squad, all were held for action of the grand jury on charges of larceny by trick.

Police said the suspects added this new wrinkle to the moss-covered confidence game:

After the victim had been taken for all his money, one of the confederates (who apparently had lost his all, too) would whisper to the victim:

"This fellow who won all the money . . . well, I know what he'll want to do . . . he'll mail it home. And I know he can't read or write. If he asks you to write his name and address on an envelope, just write your own. He won't know the difference. And when you get the money, I'll meet you and we'll split it."

Sure enough, the winner would ask the victim to address an envelope and the victim would cagily put down his own name and address.

Then the victim and the con men would walk to a mail box at 5th and H sts. nw. The victim's attention would be diverted momentarily and he would not see the envelopes switched. Another envelope went in the mailbox.

The victim would then go home, rubbing his hands, to await an envelope stuffed with money. It would never arrive, of course.

Police said the con men reasoned the victims would never complain because they, too, had resorted to trickery.

But this didn't work out. Police got complaints from Alfred L. Greene, 31, of 408 Virginia ave. se., who had been taken for $75; Julius Lewis, 32, of 27 9th st. ne., who had been hoodwinked out of $1887, and Hugh L. Ward, 28, of 4804 E. Capitol st., who lost $315.

Capital Transit Sued

Mrs. Catherine Simon, of 216 R st. nw., yesterday filed suit in District Court for $15,000 damages from the Capital Transit Co. for the death of her husband, Weston Simon, in a traffic acident.

Simon was killed June 20 at 20th and K sts. nw., when a Capital Transit Co. bus collided with an automobile, which in turn struck Simon's car.

Police Put Heat On, Crime Probe Told

By the United Press

Meyer Schine,, owner of the Roney-Plaza Hotel, testified today that Miami Beach authorities closed down his bookmaking concession after he disobeyed them and leased it to "outsider" Frank Erickson.

He told the Senate Crime Investigating Committee that Pat Perdue, identified as the "one-man-gambling squad" of Miami Beach, advised him not to give the lucrative concession to Erickson, now serving a jail term for his gambling activities.

Schine said Perdue told him the authorities did not want any "outsiders" because it "might start a battle" and advised him to deal with the "local syndicate." But Schine said he concluded the deal with Erickson and leased the concession to him for $45,000.

Several weeks later, he said, Perdue raided it and closed it up. Schine testified that the following year he went along and dealt with the local syndicate.

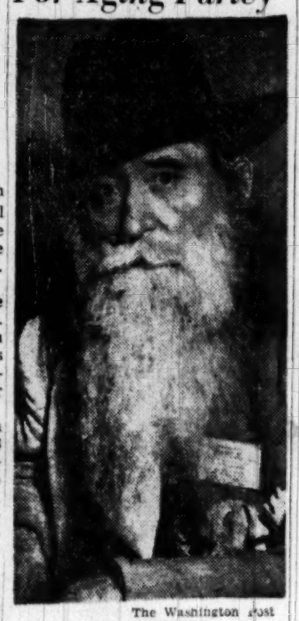
Committee Counsel Rudolph Halley disclosed that the local operator who eventually got the concession was associated with the 26-million-dollar-a-year S. and G. group.

The committee also heard race track executive William H. Johnston trace his quick rise from an auditor's job at Chicago's Sportsman's Park to the $225,000-a-year boss of that track and four Florida dog ovals.

As he did Wednesday, Johnston denied that his activity in the 1948 campaign of Gov. Fuller Warren was prompted by a desire to protect his gambling interests. Johnston had told the committee he raised $100,000 for Warren because he thought he would make a good Governor.

Johnston said he funneled the money into Warren's campaign in the hope it would cost less than a $25,000 contribution.

Texas' Davis Here For Aging Parley



The Washington Post
A. B. C. DAVIS
. . . feels like a man of 25

A Texas cyclone blew into Washington yesterday to be among the first arrivals of the upcoming National Conference on Aging.

He is Arlon Barton Cyclone Davis, 69, of Dallas, self-described "man with the longest name, longest beard and longest tongue of Texas."

Davis said he was invited here by Oscar Ewing, chief of the Federal Security Agency, who had written him: "Your interest in the problem (of aging) is well recognized and I know that you will make a significant contribution through your participation."

A hulking figure of 6 foot 3, weighing 200 pounds, Davis said his 69 years are only evident from his birth certificate.

Actually, he explained, he does the work and feels like a man of 25 or 30.

"Sixteen to 18 hours is my work day," he declared. "I'm a blacksmith, that is, a welder and auto body paint and fender man."

He also listed himself as "banker, editor, lecturer and author (of his 1937 book, "Offings and Musings of A. Nut)."

Davis attributed his healthy state to heredity, the long and healthy lives of his parents. His father, he said, died ten years ago, at the age of 87. His mother died in 1944, at 82.

"One of my grandfathers," Davis added, "died at the age of 84. But that was accidental, he was killed when his team of horses ran away with him."

Asked what he expected to contribute to the three-day conference that opens here Sunday, Davis said that if he got a chance to talk he'd tell the delegates:

"Wars are occasioned by crime. Crime is the child of poverty and ignorance. Universal pay-as-you-go pensions will alleviate poverty, tending to decrease crime and lessen the probability of war."

Davis said he is executive vice president of the Friends of the Aged Council, which he described as a Texas organization with some 500,000 members. He's plugging for a $60-a-month pension to all persons over 60.

Shimon Took $1000, Probers Are Told

the laws on wire tapping. But he said that so far as he had learned, Shimon's wire-tapping was no different from wire tapping by Federal and State law enforcement agencies—to get leads.

He said Federal and State law enforcemet officers maintain they have the ight to wire-tap to get leads. Chae said that to his knowledge, Shimon did not divulge to other persons information obtained by wire tpping. He said the Supreme Court and United States Court of Appeals for the District have construed the Federal Communications Act to mean that there must be livulging of information to make in offense.

Chase said the quick answer to the reported account by McHale of Shimon's putting $1000 into his wallet was this: if there was anything wrong, why didn't officer McHale report it at the time?

"He (McHale) knew Kay's (the District attorney's) office was at the other end of the hall," said Chase. He added that he hopes the Pepper committee will investigate McHale's motives and sponsors.

The grand jury recessed for the night at about 5:45 p. m.

McHale, now on duty with the police special investigations squad, served as one of Shimon's assistants when the latter was special investigator for U. S. Attorney George Morris Fay.

Pepper said McHale told the committee he had participated with Shimon in wire-tapping activities by direction of the lieutenant.

The Senator said the tapping of the hotel phones of Howard Hughes and the latter's lawyers was one of several cases Shimon required McHale to work on, with Shimon.

Pepper quoted McHale as saying he was informed that the Hughes' wire tapping was an official assignment, that Shimon told him it was official business for an official committee.

McHale testified he had not received any pay himself for the wire-tapping activities, Pepper said.

In the closed hearing, related the Senator, "there was also some testimony that a visitor came to see Lieutenant Shimon in the latter's office (the one provided him as investigator for the United States Attorney), and that after the visitor left Lieutenant Shimon was seen to put a $1000 bill in his wallet."

It was the only time McHale ever saw the man, according to the reported testimony, and the description of the mysterious visitor was not specific enough to give the committee much hope of finding him, it was said. The visitor was said to have been described as brown-haired, smooth-shaven, well-dressed and of slender build.

Pepper said the testimony of McHale placed the time of the $1000-bill incident within two or three days of the end of the 1947 investigation of Hughes' plane contracts by the Senate War Investigating Committee.

Committee Counsel Gerhard P. van Arkel placed the concluding date of the Hughes inquiry as August 11, 1947.

Pepper said McHale's testimony was that the Hughes wire-tapping activities of Shimon and McHale continued from July to August 11. McHale told of wire tapping at different hotels, including the Carlton, where Hughes stayed, and the Mayflower, where aides of Hughes were quartered, Pepper related.

The Senator said McHale testified about having taken notes in longhand and turning them over to Shimon. Van Arkel explained the practice described was for notes to be taken in longhand, then typed (with the original notes presumably discarded).

Pepper said McHale also testified about having helped Shimon carry recording equipment to various places. One of these was the Occidental Hotel, the Senator quoted McHale as saying.

McHale's testimony told of regular wire tapping every day, for perhaps up to 18 hours a day, Pepper said.

The committee's first decision in its closed-door meeting was that there will be later public hearings, the chairman said. Open hearings are planned as soon as the committee has had a chance to acquaint itself with the evidence.

Pepper said the committee wants to present the evidence in an orderly way. He said, "we felt it was in the interest of orderly procedure to know what the case was."

McHale went to the Capitol yesterday with four other police officers—Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent; Inspector Robert S. Bryant, chief of detectives, and Capt. Robert V. Murray, assistant chief of detectives; and Det. Sergt. George Robison, a former aide of Shimon's at the District Attorney's office, now assigned to the sex squad.

Barrett, Bryant and Murray, witnesses in Wednesday's first-round meeting of the Pepper group, were excused by van Arkel from yesterday's meeting without appearing before the committee.

Pepper said Robison will be heard in closed session at 11:30 today. He said that two other ex-aides of Shimon, Det. Sergt. Walter N. Cook, of the homicide squad, and Pct. Det. Thomas I. Herlihy, of the special investigations squad, will be heard in an afternoon closed meeting starting at 3 p. m.

Besides Shimon, the grand jury yesterday called in William J. Nolan, identified as in the finance business and having had a business dealing with Shimon in connection with the automobile business, for a five-minute appearance.

Today has been set as the deadline for grand jury action returning indictments in connection with the alleged wire tapping of Hughes telephones. The three-year deadline is set by the statute of limitations.

Church Bans Observances For Ia. 'Vision'

Necedah, Wis., Aug. 10 (AP).—A gaunt, middle-aged housewife calmly insisted today that she must "go ahead" with her expected vision of the Virgin Mary next week despite the skeptism of her Roman Catholic Church bishop.

In banning any special religious observances at Necedah August 15 when Mrs. Anna Van Hook says she will receive a vision for the seventh time, Bishop John P. Treacy of the La Crosse diocese said yesterday that he claims "are of extremely doubtful nature."

"I must go ahead with it or Our Blessed Mother will punish me," Mrs. Van Hoof said. "If she (the Church) doesn't recognize it, then I will have to bear my cross all the harder."

Indications are that as many as 100,000 persons from throughout the Midwest have made plans to flock to the farm home of the Van Hoofs—out of devotion or curiosity. Special busses and trains have been scheduled for weeks.

However, the Milwaukee Road canceled its planned special trains from Chicago and Milwaukee, after reading Bishop Treacy's statement.

The office of Passenger Agent C. F. Dahnke announced that money for all tickets will be refunded.

Bishop Treacy's statement said "the investigating committee feels that attendance of priests, nuns and lay Catholics may bring dishonor to the traditional devotion to the Mother of God. Investigators of the alleged apparitions can not recommend these claims at Necedah to Catholics.

"Formal investigation of the alleged apparitions reveals more contradictory evidence and further indicates that the claims are of extremely questionable nature."

Mrs. Van Hoof, 40-year-old mother of seven children, blamed a pamphlet she said was written by a Dubuque, Iowa, woman for the Bishop's statement that her claims are "of an extremely questionable nature." Mrs. Van Hoof said the pamphlet, entitled "Our Lady of Necedah" and distributed to visitors at the Virgin's Shrine here, "stirred up a hornet's nest because it contained things that are not true."

The Rev. S. R. Lenkowski, pastor of St. Francis of Assissi Parish here to which Mrs. Van Hoof belongs, said, "whatever the bishop says goes for me, of course."

The bishop said, "no religious exercises of any kind whatsoever will be permitted at Necedah on August 15 excepting the two usual parish masses at St. Francis Church. Catholics are reminded that August 15 is a holy day of obligation (assumption of the Blessed Virgin into haven) and they must attend holy mass."

Mrs. Van Hoof claims she had her first apparition last November and five since then, all in a grove of trees near her home. She says the most recent vision was June 16 at which time the Virgin promised to return August 15 and again October 7.

Poolesville Holds Livestock Show Saturday

The tenth annual Poolesville (Md.) Livestock Show will be held Saturday at the Poolesville High School.

The show has grown from a small cattle display in 1940 to a large livestock exhibition which is a highlight of the upper Montgomery County farm program. It opens at 10 a. m.

Cash awards and premiums totaling approximately $1000 will be awarded. The show is sponsored by the Poolesville Chapter, Future Farmers of America, the Maryland State Fair Board and farmers and merchants of the community.

Judges will be M. H. Kerr, University of Maryland, beef cattle; Gordon Cairns, University of Maryland, dairy cattle; Ural Bee, Union Stock Yards, swine and sheep; Edward Derr, New Windsor, draft horses, and James B. Outhouse, ringmaster.

Maurice C. Ward, agriculture teacher at the school, announced the following chairmen of classes: the Rev. Charles Michael, swine; Fred Campbell, sheep; Earl Nicholson, draft horses; Charles Fritz, dairy cattle; Leland Clark, beef cattle, and Edgar Crubb, in charge of the farm machinery display, expected to have nearly 100 pieces on exhibition.

Donors Rush Blood for Ala. Child, 3

Birmingham, Ala., Aug. 10 (U.P.). The heartsick parents of a 3-year-old girl today gave up their attempt to hide from the public that the child is living on borrowed blood and within hours received enough donations from donors to keep her alive for almost two years.

Irene Waters' body cannot manufacture its own blood, because she was born without bone marrow. The marrow is a source of red blood cells and when Irene's blood supply becomes low she has no natural replacement. The same condition has retarded the development of her eyes and she can barely see.

For months, her parents had been buying her two pints of blood every two weeks—the minimum amount needed—at $25 a pint. Finally, already in debt for 41 pints, and needing additional money for penicillin and aureomycin, the family appealed for held. Hundreds of calls came to the switchboard at Jefferson-Hillman Hospital and out of all those who volunteered about 40 already have given a pint for Irene's private blood bank.

A group of between 40 and 50 Naval reservists from the Birmingham Naval Air Station came by in a body later and each man contributed a pint of blood.

Ex-Wife Slain Eighteen Years After Divorce

Manistee, Mich., Aug. 10 (U.P.). A 62-year-old farmer who begrudged his wife's divorce for 18 years killed her and a neighbor today and then shot himself, police reported.

Officers said Joseph Krajkiewicz fired one blast from his shotgun into his former wife, Sophie, 3, and another into Mrs. Helen Anderson, who ran to her aid.

Then Krajkiewicz fled to the cabin where he lived alone and killed himself.

Police said he reported to the welfare office this morning to obtain food and was told he should get a job. He said he was too ill to work.

Krajkiewicz was sent to a doctor, who told him he needed hospital treatment.

His 31-year-old son, John, who supported Mrs. Krajkiewicz, was working in a field and ran when he heard the shots. He saw his father fleeing into the woods and called police.

"He'd lived around ever since he and mother broke up," John told officers. "Finding out he was sick must have snapped his mind. I guess he blamed the divorce for his trouble."

Overcharging Laid to Caltex in China by ECA

By the United Press

The Economic Cooperation Administration accused the California-Texas Oil Co. yesterday of overcharging $1,135,117 for petroleum products sent to China and demanded an immediate refund.

ECA said the company, an overseas combination of the Texas Co. and Standard Oil of California, charged too much for 42 consignments of aviation and motor gasoline, kerosene, Diesel and fuel oil. The fuel was shipped from the Persian Gulf to China from May, 1948, to April, 1949.

Caltex made 27 of the sales to its wholly-owned subsidiary, the Texas Co. (China) Ltd., ECA said. The Texas Co. (China) made 10 over-priced sales to the Shanghai Power Co., ECA said, while Caltex made five sales to the Cathay Oil Co., an independent American-owned importer in China.

ECA said 10 of the deals, involving $666,523 in overcharges, violated the ECA Appropriation Act. It said, in effect, that the price of Persian Gulf fuel delivered in China should not be higher than fuel from the United States.

The rest of the sales, ECA said, were priced $468,594 higher than Caltex prices to other customers, thus violating ECA regulations.

Unless a refund is made, the agency can go to court to recover.

Truro Parish Women Hear E. C. C. Handy

Christianity can outlive "Marxist materialism" in China, according to Dr. E. C. Craighill Handy of Vienna, Va., retired university professor, author and anthropologist.

He addressed the Ladies' Guild of Truro (Episcopal) Parish at the home of Mrs. Robert Graham, Fairfax, Va., yesterday. Handy based his opinion on the contention that Christianity emphasizes a form of family life and human relationship far stronger than "any political theory or system."

He said he found in several visits to China that the "truly Christianized" Chinese are strongly welded together by family spirit and the close relationships that are the essence of Christian living. In contrast, he declared, the foundation of Marxism is "economic materialism in which the individual and family are of no importance except to the extent of their assistance to the state."

He said his experiences in China convinced him there already are "hundreds of thousands" of true Christians there and many others who would be receptive to Christian teachings.

Adventists' Camp Meeting Opens Today

The annual 10-day camp meeting of the Potomac Conference, Seventh-day Adventists, opens tonight in Takoma Park, Md.

All Seventh-day Adventist churches in the greater Washington area will have no regular services Saturday to enable members to attend weekend services in connection with the meeting.

The opening address at the 7:30 p. m. session today at Sligo Church, Flower and Carroll aves., will be made by Elder Dan A. Ochs, president of the Columbia Union Conference.

More than 4500 persons, including 550 delegates from 50 churches in Virginia, Maryland and the District of Columbia, are expected to attend the programs. The camp meeting will conclude August 19.

Elder William H. Branson, world-wide president of the Adventists, recently elected to the post in San Francisco, will speak at Saturday's 11 a. m. devotion. He also will speak Sunday at 8 p. m.

Delegates will meet Sunday at 9:30 a. m. to open official business, hear departmental reports and elect new officials.

Meetings for both youths and adults will be held daily at 6:30, 9:30, 11 a. m. and at 8 p. m.

Sligo Church, which seats more than 3000 and Columbia Hall, seating 650, will hol dservices simultaneously. The overflow will listen through loudspeakers on the campus of the Washington Missionary College nearby.

Approximately 75 tents have been erected on the college campus for use by the campers. Others will stay in about 60 dormitory rooms at the college. Scores of rooms have also been made available by Takoma Park residents.

During the encampment, several men will be ordained to the gospel ministry.

5 Killed, 27 Wounded In India Student Riots

New Delhi, India, Aug. 10 (U.P.)—Police fired on student rioters today in Gwalior, capital of the former Marhatta state, killing two persons and wounding 22 in the second day of student demonstrations.

Three persons were killed yesterday and seven others injured when the students occupied a government building in a demand for better housing.

The angry students were fired on today as they marched in protest against the incident. A day-long curfew was imposed in Gwalior, 200 miles southeast of here, yesterday and was reimposed today. Troops were called out when rioters looted and set fire to Moslem shops.

GI Unit in Korea Gives Jap Orphans $1500 Per Payday

With United States Troops in Korea, Aug. 10 (U.P.)—Men of the Twenty-seventh Infantry Regiment are contributing $1500 every payday to a poverty-stricken orphanage near their old occupation base at Osaka, Japan.

They started contributing eight months ago when they learned the Vincentian Sisters who operate the Holy Family Orphanage were too poor to feed the children and pay rent.

The men take turns donating $10 from their monthly pay checks, and Sergt. John O'Reilly, Brooklyn, makes the collections.

Pvt. Hubert Muckle, Troy, N. Y., drew only enough pay for the contribution this month.

"We're not going to let the Commies interfere with what we are doing for the kids," said Corpl. Francis J. Cunniff.

Foot Blisters Slow Down 4-H Week Dancers

By The Associated Press

Classroom instruction gave way to social activities last night at the annual 4-H Club Week conference on the University of Maryland campus.

The swarm of rural youngsters—more than 1100 of them—had their choice of games or dancing, either square or city style.

But for many of the farm lassies, tripping the light fantastic promised to be a painful diversion.

Mrs. Gwendolin Candela, registered nurse on call at the conference, reported an outbreak of foot blisters. The girls, she admonished, either were neglecting to wear socks and stockings or picked an ill-advised time to break in new shoes.

Prince Baudouin Due to Take Oath as Belgian Ruler Today

Brussels, Aug. 10 (U.P.)—The Belgian Senate passed a bill tonight delegating King Leopold's powers to his son, and the 19-year-old Prince Baudouin will become Belgium's new chief of state Friday.

The Senate vote was 121 to 22, with 23 abstentions. The lower house approved the bill last night clearing the way for a joint session of Parliament Friday at which Baudouin will take the traditional constitutional oath of allegiance.

Baudouin in effect will be a regent until his twenty-first birthday September 7, 1951, when Leopold has promised to abdicate. Baudouin, as chief of state, will have the title of "Prince Royal," and on his twenty-first birthday he will be crowned the fifth King of the Belgians.

The delegation of powers is expected to restore relative calm to this nation, split over Leopold's alleged collaboration with the Nazis in the war. However, the transfer will not solve the royal question completely.

The four Flemish-speaking provinces that supported Leopold are said to be preparing protest demonstrations despite the King's request that all factions rally around his son.

Premier Jean Duvieusart's Social Christian (Catholic) government is scheduled to resign after Baudouin is sworn. The Prince Royal is expected to accept the resignation and appoint another Social Christian to form a similar one-party Cabinet.

Rank-and-file Social Christians broke with Duvieusart because he bowed to Socialist abdictation demands after the country was swept by waves of sabotage, riots and strikes and a civil war was threatened. The split was reflected in the vote.

Navy Orders Anti-Sub Planes From Martin

Baltimore, Aug. 10 (U.P.)—The Glenn L. Martin Co. today announced the receipt of a "substantial additional order" from the Navy for P5M-1 Marlin antisubmarine seaplanes.

The company did not disclose how many aircraft were ordered in the new contract which is in addition to another "substantial" Navy order placed July 23.

Production of the Marlin antisubmarine seaplanes was begun late in 1949 after the Navy placed an initial order for five of the aircraft. The Marlin is a successor to the Martin company's PBM Mariner series used during World War II.

Catholics Publish New Psalms Version

By Tom Schlesinger
Post Reporter

A new Roman Catholic version of The Book of Psalms—written in twentieth century language—was published yesterday.

Its publication marks the second step of a project started in 1943 by American Catholic bishops to produce an English translation of the Old Testament that might be more readable than the Douay, or Catholic version.

The "thee's" and "thou's" are now "you"; "hath" is "has"; and "hast" is "have." In the Douay version, the psalms were printed in columns of solid type, broken only by verse numbers. The new text prints them in poetic format, reproducing the balanced phrasing of the original Hebrew text both in literary structure and in arrangement of lines.

Four Washingtonians aided in the project, including the Rev. Stephen J. Hardegen, professor of Scripture at Holy Name College, who is now in Europe with copies of the new version to be presented to Pope Pius XII.

The Rev. Louis Hartman, C. SS. R., professor of Semitic Languages at Catholic University, is chairman of the editorial board for The Book of Psalms. Others on the board, including Father Hartdegen as secretary, are the Rev. Patrick W. Skehan, also professor of Semitic Languages at Catholic University; and Sister M. Emmanuel Collins, O. S. F., formerly with the English department at Catholic University, who helped in the styling of the project.

Different spacing, the elimination of Latin headings, the use of centered titles of the psalms and summarizing headings are innovations, along with fresh interpretations.

For instance, the Good Shepherd Psalm, 22, is so drastically revised that it now appears closer to the Protestant than the Douay Version.

Formerly it began:

"The Lord ruleth me: and I shall want nothing.

2 He hath set me in a place of pasture.

He hath brought me up, on the water of refreshment;

3 He hath converted my sour . . ."

Now it goes:

"The Lord is my Shepherd: I shall not want.

In verdant pastures He gives me repose;

Beside restful waters He leads me;

He refreshes my soul . . ."

The Messianic Psalm, 21, stressed in the church's devotions on Good Friday, and the first verse of which was quoted by Christ from the Cross, is changed in many respects. The old-style lament in verse 17, that "They have dug my hands and feet;

They have numbered all my bones . . ."

Now becomes:

"They have pierced my hands and feet;

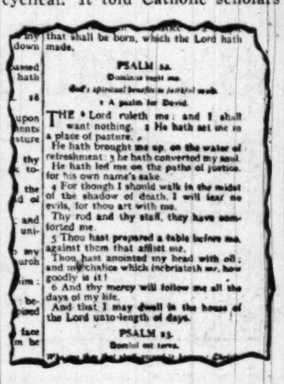
I can count all my bones."

Church sources said it is not Catholic practice to make any vernacular edition of the Bible official in the sense that its use only is compulsory for public or private readings. It is expected, however, that the new psalms will gradually supplant the Douay version.

Thirty translators from the Catholic Biblical Association are currently engaged in the translation of the Old Testament. The psalms were translated from Hebrew material dating back to 200 B. C. A version of the Book of Genesis was the first result of the project. It appeared in 1948. The last of the 46 books of the Old Testament is expected to be published in 1955.

This will be the first time Catholics have translated the whole of the Old Testament from the original scriptural language into English. The Douay version is from the Latin Vulgate, a translation of the fourth century. The Douay version was published at Douai, France, in 1609-10.

Seven American bishops who form the episcopal committee of the Confraternity of Christian Doctrine in the Catholic Church set out in 1943 to obtain a new translation of the Old Testament. In that year Pope Pius XII issued an encyclical. It told Catholic scholars



PSALM 22.

THE Lord ruleth me: and I shall want nothing. 2 He hath set me in a place of pasture. 3 He hath brought me up, on the water of refreshment: 3 he hath converted my soul. He hath led me on the paths of justice, for his own name's sake. 4 For though I should walk in the midst of the shadow of death, I will fear no evils, for thou art with me. Thy rod and thy staff, they have comforted me. 5 Thou hast prepared a table before me, against them that afflict me. Thou hast anointed my head with oil, and my chalice which inebriateth me, how goodly is it! 6 And thy mercy will follow me all the days of my life. And that I may dwell in the house of the Lord unto length of days.

PSALM 23.

The Douay version, Psalm 22

that shall be born, which the Lord hath made.

the original Hebrew text had more authority and greater weight than any trapslation.

So the scripture scholars abandoned thier plan to revise the Old Testament from existing English translations. Instead they went directly to original sources.

The Psalms were composed largely by King David around 1000 B. C. Some were set to music and were used in the Temple at Jerusalem and in synagogues. They became the prayer of the Jewish people.

'Bon Voyage' Dress Slips Into Jail Cell

Detroit, Aug. Aug. 10 (U.P.).—Two months ago Mrs. Virginia Yager, 22, stole a dress so she would "look pretty" seeing her husband off to jail.

Yesterday she stole another dress to "look pretty" when he came out.

Both times she was caught. She missed seeing her husband, Joseph, off the first time because of her arrest. Now she stands a good chance of missing him again when he gets out of prison Friday.

Home Rule Stall

In his letter elsewhere on this page Mr. Carl L. Shipley, young Republican national committeeman for the District, comes to the defense of House Minority Leader Joseph W. Martin for declining to sign the District home rule discharge petition. It is true that in the Eightieth Congress, when the Republicans were in control, Mr. Martin did work for home rule. It is also true that the bill is now bottled up by the House District Committee, on which the Democrats have a majority. Nevertheless, Mr. Shipley cannot pull Mr. Martin off the hook quite so easily.

Mr. Martin would have a plausible reason for not signing a discharge petition because of his leadership position; Majority Leader John McCormack also has not signed the home rule request. The difference is that Mr. McCormack has actively encouraged Democrats to sign, whereas Mr. Martin has maintained a standoffish attitude. Most Northern and Western Democrats, in consequence, have signed, whereas Republican adherence to the petition is lagging.

The home rule bill itself has been sidetracked by a small group of Southern Democrats against the expressly stated wishes of the Administration. Home rule, of course, is as much a Republican as a Democratic promise; it is a plank in both party platforms. The fact that Republicans are among the 204 signers of the discharge petition is itself acknowledgment that this issue of basic rights for the Capital's disfranchised citizens ought to be a bipartisan matter.

Home rule has never been so close; the Senate already has passed the bill and only 14 more signatures (or possibly a few extra to allow for duplications) are needed in the House to bring it to the floor. In this circumstance the deference to committee procedure cited by Mr. Shipley is plainly a stall. House members of both parties who believe in their party promises ought to be willing to put the interests of the people of Washington above partisan advantage.

Less Hoarding

Evidence of scare buying was reflected in extraordinarily large retail sales in July. The Federal Reserve Board reported an increase of 42 percent in department store sales for the week ended July 29 compared with the corresponding 1949 week. However, the percentage gain was below that of the preceding week, and figures for last week show another drop in the year-to-year increase.

This may mean that the peak of scare buying and hoarding has passed. At any rate, reports indicate that food buying is close to normal again in some cities, while demands for nylons and household appliances are not as heavy as they were a week or so ago. Perhaps the outpouring of official and unofficial assurances that supplies of most goods are plentiful has had a restraining effect. Or it may be that the buying spree has slowed down because the hoarders have exhausted their funds or have bought so much that they are ready to quit the game. Mounting public indignation over hoarding excesses may have contributed, too, to a decline of buying. For, as an Atlanta reporter posing as a hoarder discovered, black looks and harsh words are the hoarder's portion.

Excess Profits

Senator George is dead right when he says that an attempt "to slap" an excess profits tax on top of an increase in corporation income taxes would tie up Congress indefinitely. Indeed, it might result in no tax legislation of any kind at this session, though under present conditions speed in siphoning off some of the purchasing power that fuels inflation is of prime importance. What is needed before the new defense spending takes effect is an interim tax program involving no basic changes in the tax structure.

One of the most difficult problems connected with excess profits taxation is the determination of a tax base. Should normal profits be defined as the average of a period of years and, if so, what base years ought to be chosen? Or should normal profits be defined as a fixed percentage of invested capital? Or should taxpayers be given a choice between these two methods of computation? Endless controversy has arisen over these issues and, whatever the chosen base, hardships are bound to result. For corporation profits vary widely from year to year in case of individual companies and by industries.

The President's Council of Economic Advisers, for example, reports that profits (before taxes) of such industries as electrical machinery, automobiles, chemicals, building materials, rubber products, paper and textiles were considerably higher during the first quarter of this year than they were a year ago. However, the profits of such industries as apparel, petroleum, iron and steel, machinery, transportation equipment, and nonferrous metals were substantially lower than a year earlier. To relate these fluctuating profits to any fixed base period inevitably leads to overtaxation of some companies and undertaxation of others. And if invested capital were made the basis for computing excess earnings, companies, particularly retailers, whose capital ordinarily bears little relation to the volume of business or profits would suffer.

Only an extreme emergency justifies resort to such inequitable methods of taxation; so it is not surprising that Secretary of the Treasury Snyder advocates delaying action. Next year we shall be in a better position to estimate the costs of the defense program, and meanwhile, the Treasury experts will have had an opportunity to work out detailed plans for taxing excessive profits, ready for introduction when the need arises.

Answer To Malik

An old Russian proverb describes a certain type of behavior as like "the Devil shelling peas in your face." This is what the mendacious words of Comrade Malik must feel like as they rain, day after day, on the faces of the other delegates of the Security Council. There is nothing new about his tactics. What is happening at Lake Success is precisely what happened during the Soviet's winter war with Finland in 1939. Radio Moscow screamed unceasingly about the alleged aggression of little Finland in the detailed terms of a military communique—while the Colossus of the North was itself rolling over the frontier.

There were many so-called liberals who swallowed the Big Lie about little Finland's aggression and converted the Big Lie into what Owen Lattimore, referring to Senator McCarthy's adoption of the technique, calls "the ball-bearing lie." That they have long been disillusioned makes no difference to Comrade Malik. Indeed, Malik in his incapacity for the arts of persuasion seems to recognize it. He appears on the television screen like a continually cranked-up gramophone, soulless, conscienceless, depersonalized, a synthetic man out of George Orwell's 1984. Here is doublethink in demonstration, used not to persuade but to transfer the label of aggression which the facts pin on Soviet Russia to the United States. It is aimed, of course, over the heads of the Security Council, over the heads of his American audience—to Asia's millions. To hear with damned reiteration is all too often in Asia to believe.

In the process, of course, Malik is trying to break up the Security Council as the enforcement agency of the United Nations. Mr. Hoover would acknowledge the destruction. He would reform the United Nations as a non-Communist organization. The time, in our opinion, is still inappropriate for any such change, in spite of the wrecking tactics of Comrade Malik. Sheep and goats are not yet divisible, and we, for one, are not prepared to bracket all self-styled Communist states with Stalinism—for instance, Yugoslavia or China. Even to ask these states to choose is to do Stalin a service. What they would do, if they weren't forced into Stalin's arms, would be to keep out of either combination. Nor would this abstention be limited to Communist states. Of the non-Communist states, such countries as India, which is firmly opposed to joining what it chooses to call power blocs, would stay out. Thus Mr. Hoover's idea would simply boil down to the creation of duplicates for regional organizations which already exist within the framework of the United Nations, such as the North Atlantic Security Pact. And by that token the universality of the United Nations would be eliminated.

No, the United States should assume the lead in strengthening the U. N. as a world organization by setting up a U. N. Police Authority. Article 43, which provides for the U. N. police force, has become a dead letter because of nonimplementation by all the member states. But there is always Article 51—the self-defense provision to fall back upon. The member states who are allied in the police action in Korea already have an ad hoc police force. They should now be persuaded to set up a separate Authority so as to enlist a force which shall be permanently at the disposal of the United Nations. The answer to Comrade Malik's effort to undermine the United Nations in its moral position and as an enforcement agency lies in diplomatic action as dynamic as the action of the men who are repelling the aggressor in Korea.

Jumping On Wilson

Several Senators have used the resignation of Carroll Wilson as general manager of the Atomic Energy Commission as an excuse to do a little knifing. Senator Hickenlooper, for example, notes that Mr. Wilson was closely tied to former Chairman David E. Lilienthal—against whom the Iowa Senator conducted a windy heckling campaign with vapid charges of "incredible mismanagement" that were thoroughly discredited. Mr. Wilson, of course, strongly supported Lilienthal. Thus the current resignation gives Senator Hickenlooper a chance to strike at Mr. Lilienthal again, which he does by calling Mr. Wilson's departure "another milestone in the revamping of our atomic energy program." Senator Edwin C. Johnson, who took part in the cabal led by Senator Hickenlooper in opposing the renomination of Sumner Pike, also joins the chorus by commenting: "In my opinion, he (Wilson) was a complete flop in the job and had already been there too long."

This sort of attack, and the sources from which it comes, makes it all the more important to acknowledge that Mr. Wilson has been a competent and courageous administrator and is a man of first-rate abilities. His statement of differences with Chairman Gordon Dean may not have been tactful, but it had the virtue of being honest. Probably since Mr. Dean is now AEC chairman, Mr. Wilson's resignation is a good thing, because friction in the commission's necessarily delicate relationships is disruptive. Mr. Dean's expressed wish for harmony within the commission and with its "kibitzers" is commendable. But what Mr. Wilson said about the direction in which the atomic energy program is moving also is significant, and Mr. Wilson deserves credit for speaking frankly in an area where there has been too much temporizing. Certainly very little of the potential of the atom for other than military purposes has been developed so far. It is virtually impossible for the public to check on the atomic energy program because of the consuming secrecy—a secrecy which has been growing with little relation to actual security and which has been made more paralyzing by outbursts such as Mr. Hickenlooper's. Senators may vent their prejudices by jumping on Mr. Wilson, but they will not get at the cause of the trouble that way.

Cost Of War

American counteroffensives in Korea, though not yet on a large scale, are immensely heartening. The present performance of soldiers and marines with their sea and air support highlights the job done by the earlier arrivals in Korea—and by the South Koreans themselves. The withdrawals for the most part were not retreats in the usual sense, but were planned delaying actions, often executed under the greatest difficulties, until troops reached a line that could be stabilized. The new engagements also proved that the American soldier, properly trained and equipped, has lost none of his fighting spirit.

Many persons wonder why, in an age of bazookas with new ammunition that makes mincemeat of tanks, so many men are needed and the cost of war is so high. The answer is that as the armed forces have developed new and refined weapons, they have become highly specialized. Instead of the old masses of infantry, relatively fewer soldiers are required actually to man weapons (though the continuing importance of the foot soldier has been demonstrated in Korea). Vast crews are required behind the lines, however, for supply and to keep equipment in order—for example, highly trained tank and electronic repairmen. Thus, while the percentage of casualties has steadily gone down (in Caesar's time there were as many as 80 percent casualties in any given engagement), the number of men involved—and the cost—has constantly risen with specialization.

The general rise and the price level and improved pay and allowances for members of the armed forces have, of course, combined with improved and more elaborate equipment to boost the cost of war. For example, in 1935 the average yearly cost of maintaining an individual soldier outside combat (pay, food, clothing, etc.) was $960; just before the Korean invasion it was $2640. A few other figures, allowing for changes in specifications of the items listed, also are revealing:

	World War II	Today (Before Korea)
Pay of recruit...	$21 (later $50)	$75
Garand rifle.....	$31	$64
Medium tank....	$55,000	$200,000
Antiaircraft gun.	$10,000	$300,000
Medium bomber..	$185,000	$1,246,000
Pursuit aircraft...	$50,000	$183,000
Infantry division (with original equipment but exclusive of pay, clothing, food, etc.).....	$14,500,000	$74,300,000
Airborne division..	$15,000,000	$75,000,000
Armored division..	$30,000,000	$200,000,000

In light of these figures it is easier to understand why an appropriation of 444 million dollars sustained an army of 188,000 men in 1939, whereas four billion dollars was needed for an army of 592,000 before Korea. The very size of the new 10½-plus billion armed forces request, of course, magnifies the need for economy. Now more than ever there is no excuse for extravagance, and it is essential to keep check to insure that every dollar actually produces added defense.

Senators Vs. Issues

Six Senators, participating in a wire-service roundup, agree that the Korean situation has changed the character, and possibly the outlook, of the coming congressional elections. The six, chosen impartially from both parties, say that domestic issues are out the window, and that the only issues of consequence to the public are those arising from Korea. Accordingly the six report, with varying degrees of seeming candor, that they have formed rapid plans to shift their electioneering approach.

Whether this means a change in tactics as well as subject matter, however, is another matter. Typical of the Republican approach is Senator Capehart's. Capehart says a principal issue will be that "it is unfortunate that we have been led by such people as Secretary Acheson." Typical of the Democratic approach is that of Senator Myers, who says a principal issue will be that "those who opposed military programs are loudest now in criticism of lack of preparedness." If these are any guide, or unless events catch up with them, it will probably be whing-ding, or you're another, as usual.

"Wait Here, Please. I'll See If He's Under His Desk"

Truman And The Mundt Bill

By Marquis Childs

Republican Drive

PRESIDENT TRUMAN is faced with what may be one of the toughest political hurdles of his career. Republicans, plus some Democrats, want to pass and put on the President's desk the Mundt-Ferguson bill to regulate Communists and fellow travelers.

This bill goes so far in the opinion of the President as to violate basic freedoms guaranteed Americans under the Bill or Rights. He also believes that it would not strengthen the country's defenses against sabotage aimed at vital bases.

But if he were to veto such a bill he would, for obvious political reasons, face the charge that he was sheltering Communists. This would immediately become part of the Republican campaign in the fall.

The backing and filling now going on in the Senate is largely explained by this dilemma. It is why the leadership hesitates to call up measures such as statehood for Hawaii and Alaska that might stir even a minor controversy.

It also explains why so many days of careful effort went into the preparation of the President's message asking for additionel power to curb sabotage and subversion. The preparation included a lengthy study by the White House staff of other periods of national tension when fear and hysteria threatened to overwhelm the Bill of Rights. White House staffers analyzed the anti-Masonry movement and the Know Nothing movement directed at the Catholics in the last century, showing the political motivations behind the emotionalism.

IN HIS message Truman did not mention the Mundt-Ferguson bill by name. But plainly he had it in mind when he referred to "some people who wish us to enact laws which could be used not only against subversive groups but against other groups engaged in political or other activities which were not generally popular."

The President asked Congress in his message to broaden the authority now exercised over deportable aliens and to strengthen the laws aimed at sabotage. Some of the steps listed were requested by the Department of Justice long ago. The Senate has not acted on them.

IN ADDITION the message spoke of the "security of national defense installations" in connection with "certain defects" in present laws covering espionage. That is, in effect, the heart of the matter.

Real concern exists in responsible quarters in the Government over possible sabotage of strategic air command bases. In the present state of defense, or lack of it, the strategic air force with its capacity to deliver the atomic bomb to remote targets is almost the only obstacle in the way of Russian world conquest.

It would naturally be against such bases both here and abroad that highly trained and secret underground agents would direct their major efforts. One reason for concern is over whether the administrative setup for counter-espionage does not permit too much overlapping and divided authority.

THERE IS nothing like division of authority to dilute responsibility. This seems to have been one of the reasons why intelligence agencies of the Government failed to provide the proper alert for the North Korean attack on South Korea.

A political stalemate might block passage of these security provisions. The Democratic leadership now intends to incorporate all the steps requested by the President, along with some others, in one bill. But the Republicans may refuse to accept this compromise and they could conceivably prevent its adoption.

This would, in my opinion, be a serious matter. It could put the country in physical danger. And it could also start a divisive quarrel over where the blame should lie for failure

There could scarcely be a better illustration of the difficulties of government under our system of fixed political terms in the midst of a major crisis. The goal should be to go far enough, but not too far. And that applies not alone to security but to economic controls and everywhere that steps must be taken to meet the emergency.

In England's gravest hour in June of 1940, a coalition government came into being to save Great Britain. Under our system a coalition may not be possible. But surely political pressures in this election year should not work to cancel out the kind of action that may be vitally necessary.

Phenolmenal Water

Your paper's stories about our poisoned Alexandria water supply went too far in the issue of August 8 in saying a cook here complained the water ruined his goulash. You know any goulash is ruined to start with. I knew a man who put embalming fluid in one and the goulash ruined his embalming fluid.

You fail to report what Alexandria water does to a Bourbon highball. You have to add wood alcohol to get the water out and the taste of alcohol in.

Nor do you report the subversive effects. Old Alexandrians meeting these days, pale and panicky, saying "I think I'm turning red inside," others saying, "I'm turning green, or at least gangrenous."

Alexandrians are seemly people, but these days we spit, spit without shame. And still we can't get rid of our water.

And why can't your paper report what we think about the Army—those heroes of the Quartermaster Corps at Cameron Depot in our suburbs who "expended" their truck loads of drums of undecontaminated chemicals into our water supply—and my former fellow officers of the Pentagon wailing over the lack of manpower in Korea—and not ordering to the rescue in Korea, these Quartermasters, equipped with tanks (of Alexandria water).

I agree that it's been hot, near 90, but when I turned on the garden hose the grass turned black, the pears fell shrivelled off the tree and there were six dead robins around the bird bath. OLD ALEXANDRIAN.
Alexandria.

Martin And Home Rule

Drew Pearson's charge in his column of August 8 that Congressman Joe Martin (R., Mass.) doesn't believe in home rule for the District of Columbia is dead wrong.

As every Republican knows, Joe Martin is wholeheartedly in favor of local self-government for the District of Columbia, and he stands four-square behind every plank in the GOP platform, including the home rule plank. What Drew Pearson omitted to mention is that the so-called home rule bill is bottled up in a congressional committee which has five Democrat members to two Republican members, and that the Democrats refuse to vote the bill out because they know it will pass once it reaches the House floor. It is these Democrats, whose party platform also calls for home rule, who are blocking the bill—not Joe Martin.

If Joe Martin hasn't signed the discharge petition to have the home rule bill taken from the committee, it is because as former Speaker of the House he appreciates that the committees of Congress must be relied upon to do their jobs, and that overruling the decision of a committee dominated by members of the Democrat Party, even though he may not agree with the decision, tends to disrupt the orderly dispatch of business in the Congress.

Therefore let Drew Pearson take the Administration to task for talking out of both sides its mouth about "home rule," for it is blocking home rule for the District of Columbia by a vote of five to two—not Joe Martin.

Segregation In Jail

It is an unimaginative man indeed who doesn't find good in even the most adverse situation. Thus Judge Quinn's verdict against the Interracial Workshop for insisting on service at Scholl's cafeteria brought to light a new problem hitherto overlooked by many—segregation in the District jail.

Following Quinn's decision five Workshop members—two Negro and three white—spent the night as "guests" of the District. The group was completely unprepared, they said, for the situation they found. Upon arrival at the jail they found white prisoners sitting to the right and Negroes to the left of the center aisle, following the custom established by law in many localities. The three white members of the Workshop were then assigned to beds on the second floor, while their Negro friends were taken to the floor above.

This is not the practice of a restaurant owner with financial fears, but the practice of the district government, whose counsel is today waging a legal battle against Thompson's restaurant for holding what is morally a like policy. DAN HARLAN.
Washington.

Langer On Baseball

Senator William Langer should have a lot more important problems before him today than to find fault with Clark Griffith and his game schedule, as noted in your issue of August 4.

Let me remind the Senator that no one insists that anyone attend a baseball game or pay a double tariff. If Mr. Langer and his fellow Congressmen having nothing else to discuss on the Senate floor they should investigate where our tax money and appropriations are going. J. D. E.

Franco's Tactics

Your correspondent of August 7, Joseph I. Puente, seems to have caught the wrong end of the stick about Spain. Fighting communism is not an issue that can be used by countries which follow exactly the same tactics as communism but with a different name. There is very little to choose between the fascism of Spain under Franco and the communism of Russia under Stalin: in both the citizen is subservient to the state and the state exercises iron-handed control.

To state that because one has fought communism one therefore becomes lily-white in international politics and diplomacy is to flout all logic. American policy is based primarily on democratic principles of statehood and it is the accepted tenet of our approach to foreign affairs that we further in every way possible those countries seeking the democratic way.

Spain hardly comes under that heading at the present time and no matter how many volunteers desire to fight communism, the best way to do so is to clean house at home first. Then Spain has a right to join with other free and democratic nations in the world-wide struggle. Ideologies remain ideologies regardless of names, and fascism in America's books is as abhorrent as communism.

And pari passu, I don't believe America need shed any tears over the enmity of the Arab states. The Arab states are as guilty of aggression as the North Koreans in flouting international morality and aggressing against a United Nations resolution establishing the state of Israel.

Let Mr. Puente peddle his volunteers elsewhere. They don't add much to Franco's luster. HARRY ZINDER.
Bethesda.

National Income Goals

May I refer to the column by Mark Sullivan, entitled "Income Goals for Nation," appearing in your issue of August 6?

In this column, Mr. Sullivan refers to the statement, emanating from various governmental sources, that our annual national output is now about 100 billion dollars higher than it was 10 years ago. He calls this figure in part "alluring" rather than realistic on the ground that, while much of the figure represents real increases in production, much of it represents merely the marking up of prices and incomes.

Mr. Sullivan is in error on this point, unintentionally I am sure. Our annual gross national product, in current dollars, was about 91 billion dollars in 1939, about 101 billion in 1940, about 255 billion in 1949, and at an annual rate of about 268 billion in the second quarter of 1950. Thus, if allowances were not made for changes in the price level, it could be said that we are now more than 160 billion dollars higher than 10 years ago.

But official statements about national economic growth have been scrupulously careful to adjust for changes in the price level. Under urging by the Council of Economic Advisers, various statistical units have set about, more comprehensively than ever before, to "deflate" various dollar indicators of economic trends, so as to get a truer picture of developments in the production of goods and services. For example, on page 4 of the recent Midyear Economic Report of the President, it is stated that our total annual output of goods and services, in constant dollars (1949 price level), was about 160 billion dollars in 1939, and at an annual rate of about 267 billion in the second quarter of 1950.

In short, the 100 billion dollar gain over a decade, to which Mr. Sullivan alludes, is measured in terms of real output. This has always been stressed when the figure has been used.

Further, the estimate made, prior to the Korean crisis, that our annual output could easily grow by another 100 billion dollars or so over the next decade, was based upon estimated growth in labor force and upon estimated trends in real productivity. It was not, as Mr. Sullivan implies, a faulty mixture of projected real gains in production and projected changes in the price-income structure.

Mr. Sullivan is also in error, I believe, in his statement that, with the Korean crisis, the "goal" for increasing national output during the next decade goes "out of the window." On the contrary, the international situation makes it even more imperative that we realize the increasing national output which our resources can achieve if they are sensibly used. Of course, the more of any volume of total output it becomes necessary to allocate to defense purposes, the less of that total volume will be available for civilian consumption.

Mr. Sullivan is a distinguished historian and columnist, and I have no desire to take issue with him. But it is vital, under current conditions, that the general public realize the productive record which the American economy has achieved, and its potential for further expansion. While we need some "controls" in the current situation, we cannot hope to "out-control" the Russians; but we can certainly continue to outproduce them, and this should be our major effort.

LEON H. KEYSERLING,
Chairman, Council of Economic Advisers.

Costlier Ice Cream

When we went to the grocer's the other evening for a pint of our favorite ice cream, we found that the price had suddenly jumped from 30 cents to 33 cents. Are we to assume that this unheralded price rise is due to vast shipments of ice cream to the Korean theater or to the impending conversion of dairies into arms plants?

There has been a great deal of criticism of "hysterical housewives" of late, but the cool calculating manufacturer, whether of rubber tires or ice cream, often seems to be responsible for recent unjustified illogical price hikes; and if housewives hoard it may be because smart storekeepers cry "shortage."

We Might As Well Confess

SENATOR JOE McCARTHY has now discovered yet another nest of potential traitors. The identity of the inhabitants of this newest nest will perhaps surprise even the most casual readers of the reports appearing in this space. For the newly discovered servants of the Kremlin are none other than this reporter and his partner.

This startling revelation was contained in a letter to the editors of the Saturday Evening Post, which Senator McCarthy read on the Senate floor last Tuesday. Referring to a recent Post article by these reporters, McCarthy announced: "this article is almost 100 percent in line with the official instructions issued to all Communist and fellow-traveling members of the press by Gus Hall, national secretary of the Communist Party."

No doubt a full confession might as well be made. Before the lynx-eyed McCarthy spotted the connection, the secret liaison between this column and Mr. Hall had seemed well camouflaged. Mr. Hall's favorite newspaper, the Daily Worker, had cooperated nobly. But the fact that these reporters are regularly referred to as "Fascist warmongers," "lackeys of Wall Street," and even "presstitutes" in Daily Worker circles did not fool Senator McCarthy.

Even the active cooperation of the highest Kremlin circles was not, apparently, sufficient protection. When Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Vyshinsky went out of his way a few months ago, to describe these reporters in a most unkindly fashion as "bandits of the pen" and "congenital murderers," this seemed to offer some security even from the astute McCarthy. But no, McCarthy, armed with his new doctrine of "special dispensation," according to which absolutely no one is exempt from suspicion, was not to be fooled.

THE FACT is that in other times—say in the mid-twenties—Senator McCarthy, so inexpert a demagogue that he is constantly falling flat on his face, might have supplied some welcome comedy relief. But because of the times, and the nature of the issues in which he deals, McCarthy is not even funny.

In the letter which he read on the Senate floor, for example, Senator McCarthy waxed indignant at these reporters, not only for obeying the instructions of Mr. Hall, but also for describing as "nauseating" (a rather mild adjective under the circumstances) his own and Senator Kenneth Wherry's abortive attempt to elevate the subject of sexual perversion into a serious political issue.

This attempt, it may be recalled, was based on the chance revelation that 90 suspected perverts had been discharged from the State Department. According to Messrs. Wherry and McCarthy, this proved that the State Department is "soft," not only toward communism, but also toward sexual perversion.

If this charge is taken at face value, the State Department, in hiring (and then firing) 90 perverts out of more than 20,000 employes, is a little less than one-half of one percent "soft" on moral perversion. Oddly enough, some time ago McCarthy hired a clerk, and after several months on the McCarthy payroll this unfortunate man was arrested by the Washington police, found guilty, and fined, on charges of perversion. This unpleasant episode is only worth mentioning because, by McCarthy's own standards (if McCarthy has, say, 10 office employes on the public payroll) McCarthy is statistically some 20 times as "soft" as the State Department.

IT IS ALSO perhaps worth recalling that McCarthy, who habitually assumes such a high moral tone, has himself been found by the Supreme Court of his native State "guilty of an infraction of the moral code." The fact is that McCarthy and all he stands for, his endless frauds most thoroughly exposed, would by now be no more than a rather stale and sour joke, if the times were different. Even now, in the light of what is happening in Korea (where this reporter's partner has just arrived at the front) McCarthy's ungainly antics seem drearily unimportant.

Yet McCarthy still has his importance. These reporters are, as it happens, peculiarly invulnerable to the McCarthy brand of poison, partly because of the public nature of their record on political issues, partly because a useful means is at hand to answer McCarthy's nonsense. But this is not true of everyone. It is true of very few. "Even since Korea," remarked an able official recently, "it is terribly hard to get self-respecting people to work for the Government." Asked why, he gave a one-word answer—"McCarthy."

This is one way in which McCarthy, and those who have supported him, have contributed to the Kremlin's grand design. There are other ways. The internal security of the Government is a desperately serious matter in these times. Yet McCarthy has distorted this issue. He has told a whole series of lies about innocent people. He has worked to destroy the confidence of the people in the integrity of the Government. Above all, he has consistently promoted the suicidal illusion that the cheap pleasures of spy-hunting are an adequate substitute for the hard effort which must be made if freedom is to survive. In all these ways McCarthy and his friends have been more useful to the Kremlin than 10 dozen Gus Halls.

Rayburn Says House Can't Move Now

By the United Press

Speaker Sam Rayburn said yesterday the House can't accommodate Capitol construction crews by moving into temporary quarters right now because it has too much important work to do.

The Senate is scheduled to move out of its regular chamber next Monday to make way for workmen trying to finish a remodelling job begun last summer. It will transfer its deliberations to a cramped, pre-Civil War chamber near the center of the Capitol, just as it did last year.

Though renovation work in the House chamber also is only half-completed, Rayburn said he can't see moving the 435 representatives back to the "inadequate" House caucus room used during several weeks of the 1949 session.

"The House has so much important legislation before it, that it would be very bad to move into the caucus room now," Rayburn said. "The quarters there are cramped and turn our sessions into a shambles."

Workmen had hoped to complete the Capitol remodeling job after Congress adjourned for the summer, but the Korean war has postponed the quitting time indefinitely.

Europe Given Warning on Arms Outlay

Paris, Aug. 10 (AP).—Marshall Plan economists today cautioned western Europe that it would invite an economic relapse by plunging too heavily on military rearmament.

Urging western European nations to balance their munitions expenditures with national incomes, a report of the Organization for European Economic Cooperation advised:

"The level of government expenditure devoted to the reinforcement of defense might compromise the progress achieved in the last years, if great care is not taken to combine economic policy as a whole with the normal implications of such expenditures."

The OEEC is the European distributing agency of the Marshall Plan.

The report noted that "industrial production is now, in most countries, considerably above the prewar level, and agricultural production is approaching it." It warned of a slackening of increase in output.

Praising American aid, the report commented:

"It is difficult to forecast what might happen to the balance between supply and demand (when the Marshall Plan ends in 1952.). In a few countries, the extraordinary aid is relatively so large that its disappearance could hardly be balanced by any probable increase in domestic production or saving."

Surveying present conditions, the economists found:

1—With Marshall Plan dollars still coming in, "most countries in western Europe have achieved a reasonable balance between inflation and deflation.

2—"Part of the deferred demand from the period of wartime scarcity has been satisfied," although there still is less buying of consumer goods in some countries than before the war.

3—Personal savings have increased considerably in some countries, although the cost of living is up in all but a few.

The report observed that only in Belgium, western Germany, Italy, and Switzerland has the cost of living gone down since 1948. Living costs have risen markedly in Greece, Austria and France. Turkey, Portugal, and the Netherlands have experienced increases of about 10 percent. Advances were reported somewhat less in Britain, Sweden, Ireland, Denmark, Norway and Iceland.

Europe's Dollar Gap Narrowed $5 Billion

Chicago, Aug. 10 (U.P.).—The dollar gap between Europe and America has been narowed from $8,500,000,000 in 1947 to $3,500,000,000, but must be closed completely before the Marshall Plan ends in 1952, Guy de Carmoy said today.

De Carmoy, director of administration for the Organization for European Economic Cooperation, spoke on a Voice of American broadcast in connection with the first United States international trade fair here.

Eighteen of the 47 nations showing products at the fair are members of the OEEC and have two-thirds of the show space.

De Carmoy said the OEEC nations are determined "to become independent from extraordinary outside economic assistance" by the time the Economic Cooperation Administration ends its program.

"We want to trade with the dollar area in a businesslike manner," he said. "We want you to get goods for the dollars we need, and we want to become again cash customers as we were formerly."

House Votes 383 to 12 for Standby Controls

time if the language remains in the final version of the measure.

A combination of Republicans and Southern Democrats provided the majorities in the credit limitation and commodity speculation votes.

The section granting the President wide standby price-wage-rationing controls, center of a week of confusion and argument on and off the House floor, finally carried by a 393 to 3 vote. Against were Republicans Clevelger (Ohio), and Gwinn (N. Y.), and American Laborite Marcantonio (N. Y.).

On final passage only Marcantonio and these 11 Republicans cast negative votes: Allen (Ill.), Crawford (Mich.), Gwinn (N. Y.), Hoffman (Mich.), Jenison (Ill.), Nicholson (Mass.), Phillips (Calif.), Rich (Pa.), Sanborn (Idaho), Simpson (Ill.), and Werdel (Calif.).

Main provisions of the bill, as passed by the House, are these:

1. Permits the President, at his discretion, to put ceilings—separately or all at once—on wages and prices and to institute rationing. Prices would not be rolled back automatically, but they could be as far as May 24-June 24, 1950, levels. Wages would be frozen at that level, though some higher wages would be possible under various exceptions.

2. Permits the President to allocate scarce materials.

3. Permits the President to set priorities that would give preference to defense contracts.

4. Permits the President to requisition materials or equipment for defense and to make defense production loans up to two billion dollars in all.

5. Permits the President to reinstate wartime consumer credit controls (meaning higher down payments for autos, refrigerators and so on) and to establish new credit controls on new building (meaning higher down payments for homes and business buildings).

The allocation-priorities-requisition-credit powers were asked for by Mr. Truman on July 19. The standby wage-price-rationing powers were thrust upon him but he has said he will accept them in the form voted by the House.

At his press conference yesterday, however, Mr. Truman was reminded he had said earlier that wage-price controls and manpower allocations should come into effect at the same time, but that the time had not yet been reached. He was asked if the time was now in sight.

Manpower Controls Omitted

To this the President replied that the time was not yet.

Nether the House bill as passed nor the Senate committee bill contain any manpower controls.

At another point in his press conference, Mr. Truman was asked why he planned to use existing Government agencies rather than set up a new one to handle the powers voted him yesterday.

Mr. Truman said that he had been spending the past five years improving the administrative setup of the Federal Government, using reorganization plans and other ways. He said we have an excellent and efficient setup in the Government and there is no reason in the world why it can't meet any emergency.

Asked if this meant there would be no revival of wartime OPA, Mr. Truman told the reporter he could take it to mean that if he liked.

The House version of the home-front mobilization bill would end June 31, 1951. The Senate Banking Committee's version calls for the powers to continue a year longer, but Senator Byrd (D., Va.) already has introduced an amendment to cut it back to the House date.

The House bill contains an anti-hoarding provision calling for a fine of up to $10,000 and/or a year in jail for those hoarding more than the normal amount of "necessary" goods.

All-in-all, the Administration forces were pleased with the House bill. No one could claim it had had anything but the widest possible debate, for it was brought to the floor under a rule leaving it wide open to any member's amendment, in contrast to the more normal gag rule for important legislation.

It was only the wide bipartisan support for the basic principle of "doing something" against inflation that made the result possible.

In the Senate, Chairman Maybank (D., S. C.) of the Banking Committee opened debate with a plea for prompt passage. But Senator Taft (R., Ohio) soon was objecting to the bill as far too sweeping. He indicated he will have a full-dress speech on the subject, probably today.

Senators Mundt (R., S. Dak.), and Ferguson (R., Mich.) said yesterday they had not decided whether to offer their antisubversive bill as a rider to the control measure. Such a move could prolong debate and would leave the GOP open to charges of slowing down the key home-front measure.

AFL Urges Controls, Tax Hike, Rollback

Chicago, Aug. 10 (AP).—The executive council of the American Federation of Labor today urged immediate price controls and higher taxes but said "wages must be permitted to rise" to catch up with the cost of living.

These recommendations were contained in a five-point Korean emergency program unanimously adopted by the council at its quarterly meeting.

The resolution termed the Korean war "a nunwarrantable and unjustified invasion by Soviet Russia" and said "it cannot be regarded as an isolated incident."

The council recommended:

"1. Price controls should be put into effect as soon as possible at levels prevailing during the month of June preceding the outbreak of the Korean war.

"2. Taxes must be increased on a basis reflecting a genuine equality of sacrifice. There must be an effective excess profits tax. Tax loopholes should be closed, estate and gift taxes should be strengthened. Congress should enact a progressive schedule of income tax rates in accordance with ability to pay.

"3. Inevitably wage controls might become necessary. Any attempt to freeze wages at present rates would do an irreparable injury to the economy and deal unfairly with the wage earners. Wages already have fallen far behind the rising cost of living. Wages, therefore, must be permitted to rise to meet higher living costs and to establish a basis of parity.

"4. The President should be given standby power to ration consumer goods whenever shortages develop and to regulate heavy industries and allocate scarce materials so that defense needs will have adequate priorities.

"5. There is no need for compulsory and rigid manpower controls. The problem of providing sufficient trained workers to man defense industries can be best solved by the voluntary cooperation of labor, management and Government representatives."

Harriman Brings M'Arthur Plea for Treaty for Japan

W. Averell Harriman, President Truman's special assistant for foreign affairs, returned from Tokyo bearing General Douglas MacArthur's firm recommendation to proceed with a peace treaty for Japan, it was learned yesterday.

MacArthur was understood to have said that the need for a treaty has not been altered by war in Korea, and to have urged that work go ahead. The general has long been on record that the Japanese, by their conduct during the occupation, deserve a treaty, and that the occupation has reached a point of diminishing returns.

Services Warned To Stop Peddling War Plants, Arms

The Senate War Investigating Committee warned the armed services yesterday to stop peddling plants, weapons and equipment that may be needed to expand the Nation's fighting forces.

The committee held a closed-door session with the Secretaries of Air, Army and Navy. Chairman Lyndon B. Johnson (D., Tex.) said later that a good deal of the discussion covered the problem of so-called "surplus property" from World War II.

Johnson said there is evidence the the Defense Departments are still declaring "surplus" property that may be needed for the expansion program. He said he was particularly concerned about synthetic rubber and alcohol plants.

The committee asked the Secretaries to look into the matter and report to the legislators as soon as possible.

12:30 p. m.—Secretary of State.

Bavarians Seek 'Coke' Tax

Bonn, Germany, Aug. 10 (U.P.).—The Bavarian Party today sought to impose a tax on coca-cola because it competes with the famous Bavarian beer. The Bavarians were concerned about booming "coke" sales, which increased by 700 percent in the federal parliament restaurant here.

one, but he thought that after the election jitters are over, Congress would have time to work on such a tax. If Congress acted promptly now on the tax program he requested, it would help stem the inflationary spiral.

Asked for comment on the Senate's action in turning down four of his nominees, Mr. Truman merely remarked that senatorial courtesy still exists. The rejected nominees and the offices to which the President had named them nominess were Martin A. Hutchinson of Virginia, Federal Trade Commission; Frank E. Hook of Michigan, Motor Claims Commission; M. Neil Andrews, Federal District Judge for Northern Georgia, and Carroll O. Switzer, Federal District Judge for Southern Iowa. All have been serving under recess appointments.

Questioned on Malik

The question of the Soviet Union and the United Nations came up when Merriman Smith of the United Press asked Mr. Truman what he thought of the performance of the Russian delegation, Malik in particular.

The President said he was not interested in the Russian delegation. He said he was highly pleased with the performance of the American delegation and the British delegation. After a pause, he said he didn't like filibusters. Then he suggested that Smith turn the question around, to the American side.

"They (the Russians) are the ones who have been raising all the fuss," Smith said.

It didn't make any difference, Mr. Truman said, and added that we have been putting them down.

Corporate Tax Hike Is Voted

and 38 percent on all earnings above $50,000.

Under the new rates, corporations earning between $31,250 and $71,428 actually will get a reduction in taxes, while those earning less than $31,250 and more than $71,428 will pay more.

By applying the higher rates to one-half of 1950 income, the top effective rate this year will be about 41½ percent, and the increased collections about 750 million dollars. The full force of the higher rates would apply to all of 1951 income and years thereafter.

The committee took no action on an excess-profits tax. However, Senator O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) has promised a floor fight for such a levy when the bill reaches the Senate. He said his profits tax plan would collect about four billion dollars a year. The Senate vote may be close.

Quiet Day for Hoover On 76th Birthday

New York, Aug. 10 (U.P.).—Former President Herbert Hoover today celebrated his seventy-sixth birthday "spending a quiet day in the country."

"He's taking it easy and is spending a quiet day in the country with some friends," his secretary said. "Mr. Hoover hasn't any birthday statement to make this year and there will be no festivities."

Yesterday, while en route from California to New York, Mr. Hoover called attention to his recent suggestion that the Communist nations should be ousted from the United Nations.

"Look at the situation and judge for yourself," he said.

Husbands Enlist To Escape Wives, Sen. Morse Says

Some husbands are finding active duty with the armed forces a convenient way of getting away from their wives, Senator Wayne Morse (R., Oreg.) said yesterday.

He told the Senate Armed Services Committee that joining up may be a "good way to get rid of her."

"I think we ought to take them," Morse continued, and maybe "put them on the front line."

The Senator's comment came while the committee was considering a bill to restore payment of monthly family allowances for wives, children and parents of men drafted or called to active duty from civilian jobs.

Morse said deserted wives and children should have the right to obtain family benefits even if the husband and father did not ask for them.

Defense officers assured him that is the way the proposed law would work, as it did during the last war.

Job Freeze Studied By Civil Service for Work Grades Up to 12

The most drastic job freeze ever considered in the Federal service is being explored by the Civil Service Commission, it was learned yesterday.

In brief, this is the proposal: With few exceptions, to freeze all employes in the low and middle-bracket grades in their jobs. A freeze up to and including Grade 12 has been suggested.

Employes who are qualified for better jobs than they now occupy wouldn't be covered by the freeze. For example, a stenographer who can qualify for an accountant position.

Along with the proposed freeze order, the Civil Service Commission would set up a new unit to channel excess employes in the so-called nondefense agencies to the war agencies.

Top personnel officials reveal that their thoughts on the freeze and transfer problems are exploratory. No definite decisions have been reached. However, they have studied the job freeze and war transfer policies of World War II and they found them 50 percent effective. An official explained:

"We had an agency priority system during World War II, and under it an employe was allowed to transfer to one agency after another, each with a higher priority. Many employes did just that. When the war was over many of these persons found it most difficult to transfer back to their original agencies. There were questions over reemployment rights, and much valuable time was lost and little gained by the employes who made multiple transfers.

"We are of the opinion that when you have an employe who is a stenographer, for example, and is unqualified for more important work, that that employe should remain on his present job. He's just as well off in his own agency and he'll serve the Government just as well where he is. But if he can qualify for a better job, he should be allowed to transfer to a war agency."

The official went on to explain that the war agencies are in need of top bracket personnel because of the rapid expansion of their civilian staffs, and because many of their key civilians are in the reserves and they will be called up for active military service.

"The Government," he explained, "is the only place the war agencies can get experienced executives in Federal operations, and," he added, "the nondefense agencies must share their key employes with them. Besides," he said, "most employes in Grade 13 and above are qualified to do several different kinds of jobs."

If non-defense agencies are given personnel cuts by Congress, as now appears inevitable, civil Service will attempt to transfer as many of the surplus people as possible to the expanding war agencies without the loss of work for the people involved. Everyone appears to be agreed to this plan, including the war agencies.

CRITICAL JOBS: An interagency board will be established soon to keep a day-by-day check on the list of critical jobs from which occupants will be considered for deferments from military service. The list will cover jobs in and out of Government.

These agencies will be represented on the board: Selective Service, Labor, National Defense, Commerce, Interior and Agriculture Departments. The board staff will be located in the Labor Department. The board will add essential jobs to the critical list and take them off, depending on the supply.

EFFICIENCY RATINGS: The Senate Postoffice and Civil Service Committee yesterday gave its approval to the House bill to revamp the efficiency rating system. It added these amendments:

1. To rate employes outstanding, satisfactory, and unsatisfactory, instead of excellent, satisfactory and unsatisfactory as approved by the House;

2. To exempt wage board employes outside the continental limits of the United States from the bill.

3. To provide that boards of review set up to hear employe appeals should be "of equal jurisdiction."

One Killed, 28 Injured When Bus Hits Truck

Washington Man, Hagerstown Couple Among Victims in Pennsylvania Crash

One man was killed and at least 28 other persons were injured yesterday at Forestville, Pa., when a crowded Greyhound bus collided with a trailer truck.

The dead man was identified as Richard Spartori of Forestville, a passenger on the truck.

The injured included Gerhard Hammerstein, 36, a salesman, of 1916 17th st. nw. Hammerstein, who was traveling to Erie, Pa., was released after treatment at Bashline-Rossman Hospital in Grove City, Pa.

Another bus passenger, Antonio Corpegno, about 65, of Hagerstown, Md., was in critical condition at Bashline-Rossman Hospital with a fractured skull and fractured left hip. His wife, less seriously hurt, was hospitalized with a possible fractured left arm.

Also among the injured was Mrs. D. J. Clark of Coeburn, Va., who was treated for lacerations and contusions at Grove City Hospital.

According to wire reports, the Greyhound bus crashed into the side of the truck when the truck emerged from a side street.

The impact crushed the front of the bus back to the third row of seats. Police said several of the victims were hurt critically.

After the collision, both vehicles plowed into the front of a grocery store. No one in the store was hurt. Six ambulances removed the injured to hospitals in Grove City.

Pennsylvania State Police said the bus, bound from Pittsburgh to Buffalo, was operated by Walter Carlson of Jamestown, N. Y. He suffered leg and internal injuries.

Autoist Critically Hurt In 17th Street Collision

Elmer Nicholls, 24, of 4616 Hayes st. ne., was injured critically last night when his car was in collision with a truck at 7:10 p. m. at 17th and E sts. ne.

Nicholls was admitted to Casualty Hospital with head and internal injuries.

Police said the truck driver was Ray E. Glascow, 28, of 719 10th st. ne. A passenger in the truck, Robert Albright, 24, of 1815 Burke st. se., was released after treatment at Casualty Hospital.

Two Cleared in Deaths Of Pedestrian, Motorist

Two men were cleared yesterday of manslaughter charges arising from separate traffic accidents on United States Route 1 last week. Both cases were heard in Hyattsville Police Court.

In the first, Lieut. (jg) Anthony G. Costanzo, 25, a Navy aviator of 2500 Q st. nw., was found innocent in the death of a pedestrian shortly after midnight August 4 one mile north of Berwyn.

Costanzo testified he did not see the pedestrian, Charles W. Abernathy, about 50, of Elk Garden, W. Va., until his auto was practically upon him.

Charges also were dismissed against Claude H. James, 33, a truck driver of Burlington, N. C. James' tractor-trailer collided with an automobile one mile south of Laurel on August 1.

A passenger in the auto, John O. McLeod, 27, of 206 5th st. se., was dead on arrival at Prince Georges General Hospital. The driver, R. C. Chandler, 37, of 420 B st. se., died Monday in Freedmen's Hospital. Chandler also was charged with manslaughter originally.

Daniel to Head Hospital Drive In Arlington

Clarke Daniel, president of the Washington Homebuilders Association, will be chairman of Arlington Hospital's scheduled fall building drive, hosiptal president Gilbert Hall announced yesterday.

Daniel

Daniel, who lives at 4533 N. 32d st., Arlington, is a partner in the Washington building firm of Standard Properties, Inc.

The drive for $168,000 will be launched in early fall, Daniel said yesterday, to pay for Arlington's share of a 70-bed addition. There are now 115 beds in the hospital.

The proposed three-story east wing will cost an estimated $375,000. Hospital officials hope to receive a Federal grant through the Hill-Burton Act for the remaining $200,000.

An application for the Federal grant was tentatively approved last month in Richmond by the Advisory Hospital Council of Virginia, but final action is awaiting congressional appropriations under the Hill-Burton program.

The new hospital wing also will add more laboratory and clinic space.

Mrs. Davidson

General's Wife Plunges To Her Death

MRS. HOWARD C. DAVIDSON
. . . dies in fall

Mrs. Howard C. Davidson, 55, socially prominent wife of Maj. Gen. Davidson, plunged to her death yesterday from the fifth floor of a Baltimore hospital.

Mrs. Davidson, who lived at 3238 R st. nw., entered Union Memorial Hospital Tuesday after a stroke, her physician said. Her son Stuart, and a nurse were in her room about noon yesterday, the doctor said, when the son—seeing his mother apparently was asleep—got up from her bedside to leave and started toward the door.

At this moment, the doctor said, Mrs. Davidson leaped out of bed, stepped to the window and undid the hooks of the screen. The nurse lunged forward, just too late.

Mrs. Davidson had not been depressed, the physician—who has attended her for several years—said. She had had one stroke about a year and a half ago, he said, but had fully recovered. The second stroke, he said, was associated with arteriosclerosis.

General Davidson, now retired, was wartime commander of the Tenth Air Force in the Burma campaign. In 1928 he was in command at Bolling Air Base here.

Mrs. Davidson was an heir to the Patterson cash-register fortune, her father Frank Patterson, having been a founder of the National Cash Register Co.

She was active in social and civic affairs here and was a member of the boards of Children's Hospital and the Home for Incurables, among numerous other activities.

The Davidson estate at Cremona, near Leonardtown, Md., was well known to hundreds of Washingtonians and Marylanders through Garden Week pilgrimages.

Mrs. Davidson's brother, Jefferson Patterson, is chief of the United Nations Missions in Europe, with headquarters in Athens, Greece.

The Davidsons' daughters, all of whom have been presented to society here and in Baltimore, were visiting in Europe at the time of Mrs. Davidson's death. They are Julia Shaw Davidson, Mary Howard Davidson and Frances Patterson Davidson.

The son Stuart served in the Air Forces during the war. He is married and lives at Wenham, Mass.

Mrs. Davidson was the former Mary Perrine Patterson. She carried on her civic activities not only in Washington and Baltimore but also in her former home of Dayton, Ohio. Mrs. Davidson's mother gave the Dayton Art Museum to that city.

During the war Mrs. Davidson was prominent in the American Women's Voluntary Services.

Besides her husband, three daughters, son and brother, Mrs. Davidson is survived by two grandchildren.

Steam Put First in Milk Sterilizing

Health Officer Gives Preference Of 3 to 2 Over Chemical Process

District Commissioners yesterday set at a ratio of 3 to 2 the preference that will be given Washington milk shippers using steam instead of chemicals to sterilize milking utensils.

They acted on the recommendation of District Health Officer Daniel L. Seckinger. Seckinger had previously advised the Commissioners to give both methods equal standing as a means of increasing the city's milk supply.

Ten days ago the Commissioners agreed to allow use of chemicals—steam had previously been required. But they decided steam should be given a preference because there are too few Health Department inspectors to check many additional farms. They ordered Seckinger to decide what the differential should be.

Independents Meet Today

Yesterday's decision means dairy farmers will receive 15 points on their farm score cards for using steam—as they do now. Farmers using chemicals, for which no points were previously given, will receive 10.

Thus, the latter could not receive more than 95 of the possible 100 points from District Health Department inspectors. And since premiums paid farmers by dairies are based on scorecard standing, chemical users will receive less than steam users, though the standings of their farms may be otherwise identical.

What will the five-point penalty mean to efforts to increase the city's milk supply?

Bruce B. Derrick, secretary-treasurer of the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Association, said he thought the change would still induce some farmers to shift from the Baltimore market. The higher straight price paid by dairies here would offset premium losses, he said.

A spokesman for the independent dairies, which had favored giving chemicals equal standing, said this and other aspects of the Commissioners' decision will be discussed today at a conference of independent dairy representatives.

Called a Compromise

Seckinger said the five-point differential was "somewhat of a compromise—some wanted more; some wanted less." However, the solution seemed to satisfy neither of the opposing factions in the Washington milk industry.

Derrick, speaking for the association whose 1500 members supply 85 percent of the District's milk, said he had hoped the differential would be 7½ points. He declared the association's members will continue to use the steam method that has been required for 25 years. "They see no reason to modify what has already proved to be the best," he stated, "even though the health officer has recommended lower standards."

Robert E. Lynch, attorney for the independent Embassy Dairy, had promised court action if the differential was more than a token one. He called the decision "grossly unfair" and said: "It looks as though the association is going to have a lock on this market one way or another."

The independents do not buy from the producers association. For the last eight years they have bought much of their milk from farms outside the Washington milkshed. But this "emergency" milk will be banned after September 1.

Historic Tree at White House Felled by Dutch Elm Disease

One of the historic trees in front of the White House—a victim of the incurable Dutch elm disease—was chopped down yesterday by National Capital Parks employes.

The 60-foot elm, planted during the Grant administration on the Pennsylvania ave. sidewalk, was sawed into sections and hauled away.

Officials expressed hope that the deadly fungus, spread by elm bark beetles, has not affected the remaining trees shading the walk on which tourists gather to look at the White House.

At the same time, Montgomery County, Md., announced more than 60 of its elm trees had been affected by the disease. Greydon Tolson, head of the Department of Public Works tree division, said most of the affected trees were young. The department is now chopping down the diseased elms as fast as it discovers them.

District and Federal officials yesterday mapped out a survey area in Northwest Washington to test the effectiveness of current techniques for combating Dutch elm disease.

After a morning meeting at the District Building, Assistant District Engineer Commissioner Carlin H. Whitesell said city and National Capital Park officials will check 1250 elm trees along upper Wisconsin ave. and its cross streets to determine if previous routine checks have found all cases of the disease.

If other cases are found, the District and park agency should look around for a better means of holding it in check, Whitesell said.

The disease, which kills any tree it strikes, has not struck many of the 30,000 elms here, Whitesell said. Only about 40 cases have been reported this year. But the number of cases has increased each year since the first was reported in 1947. In some cities it has wiped out practically all elm trees, he said.

The way to fight the fungus infection, Whitesell said, is to destroy all infected trees and other unhealthy elms (which are more than normally susceptible) and to spray all healthy elms with DDT.

Board Approves Retirement of Two Teachers

The Board of Education announced yesterday approval of the retirement of two teachers from the public school system, and temporary retirement of a third.

Those retiring are Miss Estelle I. Oliver, 63, of 2517 Fairlawn ave. se., who has been teaching English and history at the Kramer Junior High School, and Samuel E. Compton, 65, 501 Lee hwy., Arlington, who has been a mathematics teacher at Cardozo High School.

Mrs. Sara C. Wolloch, 4100 Queensberry rd. nw., Division 1 to 9 teacher, has been granted temporary retirement due to disability.

Virginia Bars Permits for 9 Realty Brokers

State Board Says D. C. Agents Have No Legal Office Addresses There

The Virginia Real Estate Commission said yesterday it is notifying nine Washington area real estate brokers their Virginia permits will not be renewed because they do not maintain places of business in the State.

The action, according to E. H. Williams, jr., director of the department of professional and occupational registration, is the start of a general crackdown on brokers who try to satisfy provisions of the State code by what he termed "the fiction of a Virginia mailing address."

An investigation by the department showed in many cases the applicants paid no rent at given addresses, owned no furniture there, maintained no telephone and had no employe or representative present, Williams said.

He announced that letters informing the brokers their licenses would not be renewed were mailed yesterday. In all cases, the applicants can appeal the commission's decision to circuit or corporation courts within the jurisdictions in which they seek to operate.

The commission announcement listed only the names of the applicants and the areas in which they have operated with State permits. They were identified in Williams' announcement as Edgar D. Turner and F. L. Paterson, operating in Falls Church; Nathan Levine, doing business in Alexandria, and Dorothy G. Wood, Walter M. Eberman, Robert L. McKeever, Frederick W. Berens, Hubert I. Kleinpeter and George E. Tucker, who gave Arlington addreses.

Turner said yesterday he had a "reciprocal agreement" for several years with a Falls Church real estate company in which each used the other's offices. He said the commission had expressed no opposition to the plan until last Friday, when he was summoned to a hearing on renewal of his permit.

Turner, who maintains an office at 1719 K st. nw., said he received no official notification of the commission's action.

Kleinpeter, vice president and sales director of the Frederick W. Berens Sales Co., Inc., said his firm has had "nominal office space" for the past six years in Arlington, in a building on Courthouse Square. Following the commission's action yesterday, he said, he rented space at the corner of Wilson blvd. and N. Uhle st.

Mrs. Wood, who has an office here at 2531 P st. nw.; McKeever, who has an office in the Shoreham building, and Eberman, whose local office is at 927 15th st., all said they had "desk space" in Virginia offices but did not maintain separate telephones.

Chiswell Will

W. Wallace Chiswell, founder and chairman of the board of Peoples Life Insurance Co., left an estate of $2,146,116, according to a petition for probate of his will, filed yesterday in District Court.

The estate is to be divided equally between his widow, Mrs. Adelia Nelson Chiswell, 2825 Normanstone dr. nw., and a sister, Mrs. Helen C. Leith, 3101 Macomb st. nw., his will provides. It was dated July 11, 1944.

Mr. Chiswell died August 3. He organized Peoples Life Insurance Co. in 1903. Most of his estate consisted of stock in the company, according to the petition for probate.

The rest of the estate consisted mainly of cash and life insurance policies. The petition stated Mr. Chiswell and his wife jointly owned real estate in Washington and Rehoboth Beach, which became hers solely on his death.

Mrs. Chiswell and a nephew, William T. Leith, 5505 Brite dr., Bethesda, Md., were named executors.

Commissioners Make 2 New Appointments

District Commissioners yesterday appointed Dr. Rudolph J. Depner, 45, superintendent of the District Training School for Feeble-Minded at Laurel, Md.

Depner, now superintendent of the Rainier State School in Washington, will take over the $8800-a-year post November 1 when Dr. Kenneth B. Jones retires. Jones, 65, was superintendent of the school for 10 years after it opened in 1924, then returned three years ago to fill a vacancy until a permanent superintendent could be found.

Dr. Depner — Fleming

Since his graduation from Duke University Medical School in 1932, Dr. Depner has been superintendent of, or held important positions at similar schools in Rhode Island, New Hampshire, Massachusets and the State of Washington.

For a period of 10 years ending in 1945, Depner worked in the New York State Mental Hygiene Clinic as director of clinical psychiatry and assistant director in child guidance. He is a native of Woonsocket, R. I.

The Commissioners yesterday also promoted Braden R. Fleming from the post of assistant superintendent to superintendent of District buildings. He fills the vacancy caused by the death of Howard O. Akers two weeks ago.

Fleming, 55, has worked for the District since 1934. He started as an operating engineer at the old Police Court building at 6th and D sts., nw., then served as chief mechanical superintendent of District buildings, and since 1948 had been assistant superintendent. The promotion gives him a $1000 pay boost to $6400 a year.

Polio Cases For Week Up In D. C., U. S.

Number in Nation Under Last Year's; Figure Higher Here

Polio cases last week increased throughout most of the Nation, in characteristic summer fashion, but the toll continued to run far below last year's incidence..

Statistics, released yesterday by Public Health Service, showed 1186 new cases for the week as compared to 970 recorded the previous week.

That total, it was noted, marked the first week since last October that the weekly toll passed the 1000 mark.

In 1949, a record high year for cases reported, there were 2446 new polio cases recorded for the week ended August 6. This year's total to last Saturday was 7305, compared to 10,725 for the corresponding period last year.

The District of Columbia did not reflect the more favorable national picture. Here, the week's cases totalled 15, to four for the same week of last year, and the year's total to Saturday was 51, to 17 for the same time last year.

Yesterday, three new cases were recorded in the District, another in Prince Georges County, Md., and two from Fairfax County, Va.

The day's new cases in the District included a 2-year-old girl of the 400 block 5th st. ne.; a 12-year-old boy of the 300 block Division ave. ne., and an 18-year-old woman of the 1300 block Allison st. ne. They brought to 63 the number of polio cases recorded to date this year.

The Prince Georges County victim was a 5-year-old girl of the 5300 block of Taylor rd., Riverdale. She was the county's twenty-first case this year. The Fairfax, Va., cases were two girls, 4 and 2 years old, of Fort Belvoir.

4 Youths Get Stiff Penalties For Break-Ins

Jail sentences ranging from 7 to 16 years were imposed on four members of a gang accused of six housebreakings in Prince Georges County this summer. They pleaded guilty.

In handing out the stiff penalties, Judge Charles C. Marbury of the county circuit court, served notice on "all others criminally inclined" to stop and consider when they arrive at the Maryland State line.

Heaviest sentence—16 years in the Maryland State Penitentiary—was given to James Hern, 26, of 7900 Allentown rd., Oxon Hill, on five charges. Roger Jarin, 20, of 925 Massachusetts ave. nw., received 15 years on five charges.

Lesser sentences in the Maryland House of Correction were given to the other two. John George Gonzaga, 19, of 726 I st. se., was given nine years on three counts, with sentence suspended generally on three others. Thomas Olson, 18, of 1001 K st. ne., received seven years on two counts. He also had sentences generally suspended on three counts.

Gonzaga was arrested June 12 by U. S. Park Police less than 15 minutes after the four were foiled in an attempted robbery of a gasoline station at 4321 Marlboro pike, Hillside. The operator, Elmer E. Batterton who lives next to the station, surprised them, but was severely beaten before the group.

The others were picked up by Prince Georges police later.

Other housebreakings charged to the gang included service stations in District Heights and Landover Hills, a Silver Hill cleaning establishment, and a grocery store and appliance store in Oxon Hill.

Chest Goal $4,100,000, Up $108,281 From 1949

$5 Million Needed But 'We Must Be Realistic,' Drive Chairman Stresses

By V. R. Montanari
Post Reporter

The 1951 Community Chest Federation campaign goal was set yesterday at $4,100,000.

The figure is $108,281 higher than last year's quota, and $542,269 more than the amount raised at the end of the 1950 campaign.

The new drive for funds to support Chest organizations in Washington and five nearby counties opens with the first report luncheon on October 17.

The $4,100,000 figure was recommended by the campaign committee as a realistic amount for the Washington area.

It was substituted for a drive goal of $4,422,704.05 recommended earlier at the meeting by the budget committee.

Charles E. Smoot, budget committee chairman, said the higher figure he recommended was based on a formula adopted by the executive committee.

The formula would have allowed a 10 percent increase in allocations to individual Chest units over their 1947 or 1950 allocations, whichever was the larger.

Smoot declared if he had recommended a figure based on actual needs of the Chest agencies, it would have been about five million dollars.

Mustn't Set Sights Too High

In recommending the $4,100,000 figure, Chairman Hugh Duffield of the campaign committee agreed that the minimum needs were nearer five million dollars, but declared his committee had to "assay what we can raise." On that score alone, he said, he differed from the budget committee.

Duffield pointed out that thousands of campaign workers must be recruited and asserted that if an unreachable goal were set, it would hurt morale.

Allocations recommended by the budget committee, which had been based on the $4,422,704 figure, were referred back to it for further consideration.

On the motion of Lee D. Butler, president of United Community Services (Washington Chest unit), the budget committee was asked to restore the relative positions held by the various Chest units in 1947.

Submits Figures

Butler had figures showing that the percentage of allocations from the Federation funds had increased for all five Chest units outside of Washington between 1947 and 1950, while the UCS percentage had decreased.

Other recommendations referred back to the budget committee were:

1. To continue the present formula for payments to hospitals treating Chest-supported patients, which average $13.50 per day for adults and $3.60 for children.

2. To include in the goal funds for Associated Services for the Armed Forces, partial successor to the USO.

3. To increase the contingency fund by $25,000 in case other national organizations are admitted to Federation support.

GEICO Earns $525,093 Net In First Half

Net profit after providing for Federal income tax of Government Employes Insurance Co. for the first half of 1950 was $525,093 compared with $596,963 for the corresponding period last year. Earned premiums amounted to $3,499,223 this year and $2,982,996 in the first six months of 1949. Losses and loss expenses incurred totaled $2,125,056 this year and $1,634,910 last year.

Premiums written in the 1950 period totaled $4,041,689, a new high record and an increase of $777,593 or 23.8 percent.

The "decrease in net earnings was caused primarily by the Nation-wide trend toward lower premiums—and consequent lower profit margains—which prevailed throughout 1949 and into 1950," the reports says. "This development was anticipated and was reported in the annual report for 1949."

The number of policyholders increased from 115,853 on December 31, 1949, to 130,967 on June 30 and from 104,561 a year previously. The expense ratio for the first half of this year increased to 13.1 percent from 12.9 for 1949 and 12.4 percent for the first half of last year.

Progress reports have been mailed to the stockholders of the Government Employes Corporation and of the Government Employes Life Insurance Co., but as both companies have been in operation only a few months detailed financial results are not included in them.

AUTO LEASING: Capital Fleets, Inc., Daingerfield rd., Alexandria, has been organized to rent fleets of passenger fleets of passenger automobiles to companies now operating their own cars. The advantage of the company's plan is that firms which require autos for their salesmen or similar uses are enabled to reduce their capital investments by leasing. Harry W. Bendall is president of the company.

COMMITTEEMEN: Samuel W. Fry, jr., president of the Washington Chapter of the American Savings & Loan Institute, has appointed the following committees to prepare its fall and winter program:

Educational Committee—Herman Schwertner, chairman; Richard Sinclair, vice chairman; Donn B. Thomas, Stuart O. Thompson, Joseph P. Burke, jr., William H. Rippard.

Membership Committee—William Blumnenauer, jr., chairman; Robert F. McConkey, vice chairman; Vivian D. Loving, William E. Grimm, jr.; G. Wayne Bishop, Charles C. Elderkin, James Clark, Worth Arnold.

Program Committee—Donn B. Thomas, chairman; Stuart O. Thompson, vice chairman; Joseph F. Zegowitz, jr.; Ann Fague, John U. Raymond, Mildred G. Foore.

20-Mile Pipeline Authorized for County Gas Firm

The Federal Power Commission yesterday authorized the Prince Georges Gas Corp. to build and operate 20 miles of natural gas pipeline between facilities of the Atlantic Seaboard Corp. and the Prince Georges Corp. storage and compressor station.

The new pipeline, which will cost an estimated $1,360,000, will enable the Prince Georges Corp. to deliver an increased volume of natural gas to its parent firm, the Washington Gas Light Co., and to another subsidiary, the Washington Gas Light Co. of Maryland.

The proposed facilities could deliver 122,000,000 cubic feet of natural gas a day to customers in the District and adjoining areas of Maryland and Virginia.

Hour of Light Exercise

Robinson Paid $1 And He's Worth It

By Red Smith

NEW YORK, AUG. 10 (NYHT).—On the theory that the laborer is worthy of his hire, Sugar Ray Robinson was paid at the rate of $1 an hour for his exercises with Charley Fusari in Jersey City's Roosevelt Stadium last night. A plumber gets $2.50, but runs a graver risk of injury. Those big pipe wrenches hurt when dropped on a toe.

Red Smith

After the 45 minutes of light punching and 15 minutes of heavy breathing between rounds which constituted Robinson's fifth successful defense of his world welterweight championship, witnesses remained cowering in the ball park, reluctant to risk their limbs in the seething tangle of traffic outside.

It was agreed among them that if and when Korean operations call for the aid of a small carrier, the Government need seek no farther than the Harlem address of Mr. Robinson. If Sugar tired, it was from the burden he bore. Fusari weighed 145¼ pounds.

MR. GEORGE GAINFORD, curator of the complete welterweight champion and fractional middleweight champion of the world, explained that his tiger was weakened by his midday ordeal of sweating off 4 ounces to reach the legal limit of 147 pounds.

"You could see he was weak," Mr. Gainford said. "When he had Fusari hurt, he didn't have the stren'th to finish him."

"Strength of character?" Bill Heinz inquired softly, evilly.

The benefit for the Damon Runyon Cancer Fund was beneficial to all concerned. It produced approximately $45,000 for Walter Winchell's estimable cause. It was worth about $24,000 to Fusari and presumably left a modest profit for the promoters, Andy Neiderreiter and Humbert Fugazy. For everybody else, it was a restful evening.

A DEEP, soul-satisfying peace reigned in the ring. Tranquility lay upon the silent crowd. Outside of a telegraphic chess match, there could be no quieter competition for any championship.

In an entertainment characterized by gentle fraternity, sweet accord, and Chesterfieldian courtesy, the pinnacle of courtliness was attained by referring to Fusari as a challenger. It was not explained whom he was challenging for what. Anyhow, his caution, his prudence and discretion successfully challenged description.

For his part, Robinson brimmed with compassion. On the several occasions when his fists, which now and then seemed to act independently of the guiding brain, lashed out and smote Charley forcibly upon the chops, the gentleman inherent in all champions quickly asserted himself. Appalled at the savagery of the beast within him, Sugar would step back and hitch up his drawers fastidiously.

Shirley Povich, The Washington Post's sports columnist, is on vacation. His column will be resumed upon his return.

It was as though he had suddenly remembered the presence, mentioned earlier by Mr. Winchell, of those flowers of fashion, Miss Margaret Truman, Mr. Sherman Billingsley, Miss Fay Emerson, Mayor and Mrs. O'Dwyer, Miss Ann Sheridan, Mr. Morton Downey, Admiral Bull Halsey, Miss Ethel Merman and Mr. Toots Shor. In such company, one needed to look well groomed.

What the evening lacked in bestiality it made up for in ceremoniousness. Never have so many been introduced from a ring with such little reasons. As a sop to the vulgar tastes of fight fans, Mr. Winchell even introduced a pugilist, calling upon Jake LaMotta to "confirm or deny for the press and public the report that you are now ready to meet Sugar Ray Robinson for the middleweight championship."

"I WILL BE GLAD," Jake replied, "to fight Ray Robinson or any other challenger in that division." His features wore the only scowl of unfriendliness discernible in the entire gathering. Even though he had been warned to expect something of the sort, he did not appear gratified by this public implication that he has, up to now, been unwilling to give Robinson a chance at those fractions of the middleweight title which Ray doesn't already hold.

Masterson Masters Old Pals After 8-Run Second Takes Opener

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

The Nats pitched their two best left arms last night and got a split with Boston in a twi-night doubleheader at Griffith Stadium.

Bob Kuzava won the first game, 11-2, on the strength of a 14-hit Washington batting attack that snapped a four-game Nat losing streak. Gene Bearden, making his first local start since joining the Nats from Cleveland a week ago, dropped the second game, 4-3.

Walter Masterson, an ex-Nat, tamed his old sidekicks for Boston with a six-hitter. A crowd of 11,091 sat in on the six-hour program, delayed for an hour and nine minutes during the first game because of a cloudburst which made footing slippery.

Kuzava Wins 7th, Hits .500 Mark

In the first game, delayed more than an hour by a hard rain, Bob Kuzava chalked up his second straight 11-hit victory, and his seventh win of the season. That boosted him to the .500 mark for the first time.

Three Red Sox rookie pitchers, Will Nixon, Dick Littlefield and Jim McDonald, appearing here for the first time, were treated rudely in the Nats' eight-run inning, their fourth of the season.

Fouteen Nats went to bat in the inning, which also saw Mickey Vernon twist his ankle rounding third in the mud. He will be sidelined for a couple of days, with Sam Mele taking over first base.

Vernon started it with a single. Cass Michaels and Sam Dente followed with singles for one run. Grasso walked and Kuzava singled for two more.

Gil Coan singled the fourth run home and Noren walked. Mele batted for Vernon and singled, driving in the fifth and sixth runs. Noren scored the seventh on Littlefield's wild pitch and walks to Ed Stewart, Michaels and Dente forced in No. 8.

That eight-run inning wiped out a one-run lead the Sox gained in their half of the frame when big Walt Dropo clouted a tremendous home run half way up in the left field bleachers. It was his 26th of the year.

Washington stretched the lead to 9-1 in the third on a single by Coan and Noren's two-bagger off the rightfield wall. That hit extended Noren's hitting streak to 16 games.

A double by Al Zarilla and singles by Birdie Tebbetts and Dom DiMaggio brought in Boston's second run in the seventh inning.

And the Nats capped their scoring with two runs in the bottom of the seventh on singles by Grasso and Kuzava, an infield out, and a two-run single by Noren.

Noren Hits in 17th Straight Game

Washington took a 1-0 lead in the first inning of the second game on Eddie Yost's walk and singles by Irv Noren and Sam Mele. Noren's hitting streak thus mounted to 17 games.

The Red Sox got rough with Bearden in the third and wiped out their deficit with three runs. Singles by DiMaggio, Goodman, Stephens, Doerr and Zarilla did the trick.

Masterson subdued the Nats with two hits and no runs from the third through the fifth.

In the sixth, Boston upped its lead to 4-1 with the help of the slippery outfield. With two outs, DiMaggio singled and scored when Noren fell down trying for Pesky's routine hit, which went for a triple.

Bearden yielded a single to Matt Batts, leading off in the eighth, but the Red Sox didn't score.

The Nats moved to within striking distance with two runs in the last of the eighth. A walk to Yost, Noren's triple to the centerfield bullpen, and Mele's line drive to DiMaggio cut the Nats deficit to 4-3.

Goodman and Dropo singled in the Boston ninth, but there was no run making as the result of a Yost-to-Michaels-to-Mele double-play.

Masterson gave the Nats only frustration in the ninth as he got Michaels on a fly to Di Maggio, Dente on a foul to Batts and Bearden on a fly to Di Maggio.

IN SHORT, Willard Nixon, Red Sox righthander, knocked out of the box in the second inning of the opener, took a quick shower, and enplaned to his Lindale, Ga., home to see his 3-weeks'-old son for the first time. Tonight, Sandy Consuegra (4-2) pitches against Boston's Ellis Kinder (11-11) . . . Dropo's first-game homer was the first circuit clout by a Red Sox player in Griffith Stadium since 1948. . . . Big-league fans rubbed their eyes when Catcher Len Okrie batted ninth, behind Pitcher Gene Bearden. . . . It was Okrie's first start of the year. . . .

Tam Delayed By Cloudburst; Pros Protest

Chicago, Aug. 10 (AP).—The opening round of the $50,000 World Championship Golf was cancelled today after a cloudburst fell with only four of the 32 pros still on the course.

Promoter George S. May's decision to wipe out the day's play in the men's pro and amateur and women's pro meets erased a brilliant four-under-par 68 by Amateur Wilford Wehrle of Ormond, Fla. He topped all the pros who got home before the downpour.

The eight-player women's amateur had finished before the rain and stands in the books. But the 72-hole competition in all other divisions will start again tomorrow and close next Monday instead of Sunday as scheduled.

Three pros were deadlocked at two-under-par 70, including Tommy Bolt, Ed (Porky) Oliver and Henry Ramson, to pace the all-for-nothing efforts of 28 pros.

Among the four still on the fairways when the rain washed down was the British Open Champion Bobby Locke, who had driven off the eighteenth tee when play was halted. He needed a par four on the final green for a 70 and a share of first place.

Wehrle and Demaret loudly protested May's decision to invoke a standing rule in his Tam O'Shanter spectacle which stipulates that in case of inclement weather, the tourneys may be postponed and all scores in any competition for the day cancelled.

While Wehrle and Demaret threatened to quit the meet, both cool off before tomorrow's round. An $11,000 top prize is at stake in the pro meet and $100 worth of merchandise in the amateur.

Babe Zaharias and Patty Berg had fired 73's, three under women's par, to pace the six women pros who finished.

All-Stars, Eagles Play Before 90,000

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Chicago, Aug. 10.—Football, which has been more or less backing into the sports scene since mid-July, crashes right in the front door tomorrow night as the College All-Stars try to match touchdowns with the Philadelphia Eagles in Soldier Field.

It's been customary for the past 16 years for this game to kick off the gridiron season and it's been just as customary for the pros to be favored.

There is no exception in the seventeenth annual meeting. The power-packed Eagles, champions of the National Football League for the past two seasons, are 14-point favorites to teach the Nation's college stars of 1949 a lesson.

IN SHORT—Coaches Bo Rowland of George Washington, Jim Tatum of Maryland, Bob Margarita of Georgetown and Eddie Erdelatz of the Naval Academy are on hand to watch the fun. The Washington Redskins will be glad when tomorrow night's game is over as four of their rookies will be able to rejoin the squad at Los Angeles, Halfbacks Hall Haynes and George Thomas, Tackle Lou Karras and Center Harry Ulinski.

Game on TV And Radio Here

The Philadelphia Eagles-College All-Stars football game tonight in Chicago will be televised and broadcast locally. Television will be over The Washington Post Station, WTOP-TV, channel 9, and broadcast will be over WEAM, 1930, both at 9:30 o'clock

Hamner Bats In 4, Scores Winning Run

Philadelphia, Aug. 10 (AP).—Singles by Gran Hamner and Andy Seminick and an error by Bobby Thomson in the tenth inning gave the League Leading Philadelphia Phillies a 6-5 victory over the surging New York Giants before 33,032 fans at Shibe Park tonight.

Dave Koslo, third of the Giant pitchers, was the victim of the overtime clash. Hamner, who drove in four runs including two with a homer, opened the inning with a single. Seminick crashed a single through second, sending the Phillies' shortstop to third and, when Thomson made a wild throw, Hamner raced home with the winning run.

Jim Konstanty, who followed Bubba Church and Bob Miller to the mound, received credit for the victory. The Phillies' ace reliever took over in the eighth.

Bums Nip Braves, 4-3, Take Over Third

Boston, Aug. 10 (AP)—Brooklyn's Dodgers, aided by consecutive home runs by Gil Hodges and Roy Campanella in the fourth inning, shaded Boston's Braves 4-3 tonight and slipped into third place three percentage points ahead of the idle St. Louis Cardinals.

The game, attended by 24,758 paid fans, was enlivened in the fourth when Plate Umpire Lou Jorda, resentful of remarks from the Tribesmen, cleared the Boston bench.

Reds Spout Our Football 'Murderous'

By The Associated Press

RADIO MOSCOW is telling Russian listeners that American football is so "murderous" that players in Ann Arbor, Mich., "are often carried from the football field straight to the cemetery."

Ann Arbor is the home of the University of Michigan, which turns out top football teams but scarcely as tough as the Moscow commentator pictures them.

The broadcast, picked up by American monitors, blamed profit-hungry promoters for the "murderous" play. It said they are trying to build up big crowds by "turning every football match into a fight."

The broadcast also put a "barbarous" label on other American sports contests and concluded that its all part of a dark plot.

The aim, the broadcast said, is to stir up the "bestial instincts" in American youths and get them ready for the new world war "about which the Wall Street bosses are dreaming."

On football, the broadcast had this to say:

"Football players are forced obediently to carry out the orders of their bosses under the threat of unemployment. For the men who treat sport as a money-making proposition, peoples health and lives are of no concern."

Two Macks Float Loan To Buy Control

Philadelphia, Aug. 10 (U.P.).—Two Mack brothers—Roy and Earle—announced today they will buy control of the wallowing Philadelphia Athletics and try for new life in the club their father has managed for 50 years.

The brothers said they are ready to borrow $1,800,000 to buy 872 of the 1500 shares of stock owned by interests which include Mrs. Connie Mack, sr., and Connie Mack, jr. They were given the opportunity to buy under a 30-day option effective since August 1.

Roy, A's vice president, and Earle, deposed assistant manager, said arrangements have been made with the Connecticut General Life Insurance Co. of Hartford "for financing of this purchase." The pair already owns 24 per cent of the club stock.

In a terse statement that may hold the key to the future of the seventh-place Athletics, the Macks said, "Additional working capital will be procured to build up the team."

New blood appeared headed for the front-office also, although the elder Mack will remain as manager. He owns 300 shares of stock, but remained neutral in a family fight which pitted Roy and Earle against Mrs. Mack. Their stepmother, and Connie, jr., their half-brother.

Fishermen Have Real Champion in Hudoba

By Ralph Murdock

IF WE WERE asked to pick an individual who has probably worked harder for anglers' rights and conservation than anyone else, we would have to name Mike Hudoba, Washington editor of the magazine Sports Afield. Mike, an unassuming type of fellow, only dons the gloves when fishermen's privileges and better angling are at stake.

Murdock

He is authority on fishing legislation and can always be found at Congressional hearings when the future and welfare of angling are involved. Hudoba has just accepted a place on the program of the meeting of the Southeastern Association of Game and Fish Commissioners, at the Hotel John Marshall, in Richmond, October 16, 17 and 18.

PEAK CATCHES OF bluefish are now being made in the upper Chesapeake Bay. Blues are off Chesapeake Beach and the Herring Bay area. Bert Lamb has been top skipper so far. In two trips he bagged 93 of these gamesters and later with Reggie Clark, Nick Corvelli, Marianno De Francesci and Angelo Vammino, he landed 110 of the swifties. The average weight was around the one-pound mark.

Weekend Suggestions

BLUEFISH — Chesapeake Beach and Holland Point area is red hot. Catches up to 110 reported on Wednesday. Yellow head Lusby's and No. 1 Nungesser will catch them.

SPOT—Point Lookout area is hot. We know of two catches of 276 and 360. Bloodworms and peeler crab will entice them.

ROCKFISH — Most pan-size in Eastern Bay and Holland Point area. White head Lusby lure best with pork rind.. Grass shrimp scarce.

Baltimore's Clem Crowe Rates Title as 'Fatherly' Grid Coach

seen a lot of men go up early. They're down now, and forgotten.

"I think I've had ample time to size up the pro situation with that lengthy apprenticeship at Buffalo. And I've been in this football business all my life."

With all his associations, Crowe goes back to his greatest, the man who founded an amazing football coaching dynasty.

Crowe said: "I don't think anyone could play under Knute Rockne without learning a lot. And, mainly, I think we learned how to handle men."

There's a definite Washington flavor to Crowe's coaching staff. Rocco Pirro, Catholic University standout, is coaching the line in his first venture. Wayne Millner, perennial Redskin favorite, is the end coach. Handling the backs is Joel Hunt, Texas A. and M. star in the '20s.

Crowe is a realist, the job with Baltimore is the toughest he ever tackled. He seems completely unworried, though. Maybe he figures if things get too tough he always can go back to his 50-acre farm near Eden, N. Y.

He will always be sure of a genuine welcome there.

Oxford Race Week Will Open Today

By Happy Walker

Two major regattas will attract most of Washington's sailing and power boat hobbyists this weekend with Maryland's famed Eastern Shore the scene of both events.

Walker

The Oxford race week gets under way today with the Tred Avon and Chesapeake Bay Yacht Clubs staging their annual three days of sailing events.

For those who have a hankering for national championships in the speedboat world, the spotlight turns to the Cambridge (Md.) Yacht Club where a half dozen national crowns will be at stake tomorrow and Sunday.

Always a favored meet for the country's top racing drivers, the Cambridge Yacht Club regatta gets under way tomorrow with a full slate of B, C, D, E, and F service runabouts and two championship classes in F and A racing. Featured attraction of the day will be the three-heat Gold Cup classic expected to draw some of the East Coast stellar drivers.

Guy Lombardo and his Tempo VI, 1948 Gold Cup winner; Harry Lynn's La-ha-la, last year's winner, and newcomers George Sarant's Etta and Danny Murphy's Dee Jay are expected.

Mile trials and national championships in B, C, D and E racing runabouts and 48 c.i. runabouts will highlight Sunday's schedule which gets under way at 10:00 a.m.

BLUE RIBBON sail racing will be the order of Oxford race week, three-day event with the Gibson Island-Oxford race for cruising, racing and delta classes, starting today, drawing a banner entry of the blue water skippers.

Saturday and Sunday will see a triple-header schedule in the larger and smaller classes. The latter will draw heavily from the Potomac River Sailing Association and Columbia Yacht Club sailing clan.

Jockey Glisson Dies in Spill

San Diego, Calif., Aug. 10 (AP).—Apprentice Jockey John Glisson, 17, of Winnsboro, S. C., was fatally injured in a spill aboard Mr. and Mrs. Jack Carava's Broker during the running of the fourth race at Del Mar track today.

Dr. W. W. Stadel, hospital superintendent, said Glisson, younger brother of Gordon Glisson, national riding champion, died of a head injury.

Broker, on the rail as the field swept into the clubhouse, turn stumbled and threw Glisson into the fence. He was rushed to the San Diego County Hospital, where he died 10 minutes after arrival.

Rosedale, Taft, Langston Win In Playoffs

Southpaw Barry Payne pitched Rosedale of the International League to the 12-year-and under championship in the Walter Johnson Memorial League playoffs at Taft Junior High School yesterday, beating Taft of the American Association, 5-2.

Payne, who chucked a no-hit shutout in the series opener Tuesday, allowed only five hits and struck out 10. Frank Leonardo pitched his third complete game in three days for the losers, and though he gave up just three hits, he was extremely wild.

Leo Mascetti turned in a two-hitter for Taft of the American League to down Rosedale of the National League, 8-5, and capture the under-14 title. It was Mosceti's second triumph in the three-game series.

Ed Muligan, who relieved starting Pitcher Robert Ellis after opening the game as catcher, collected both of Rosedale's hits, two triples, one with the bases loaded. Buddy Brotzman homered for Taft in the sixth with none on.

In the other 14-and-under division, Langston tallied five runs in the first and eight in the sixth to take a 14-9 slugfest from the Police Boys Club No. 2 and win the title series, two games to one.

DONA

THE newest thing in a cocktail lounge is an art show. Alex Stuart, agreeable owner of the Colony Restaurant and Lounge, reports that the original works with which he decorates his lounge are finding many a buyer.

The present show, his third, is by James Cupoli and his pupils. A very interesting portrait of a woman, which draws the attention of the room, is by the teacher himself.

Alex Stuart has originated many improvements in his field. His restaurant, across from the Mayflower, is tops in comfortable surroundings and service. The subtle cooking ranks with the best. The room is spacious and quiet, and there is no crowding or erass commercialism to irritate the sensitive guest.

The Lounge gives the same impression. Deep gray carpeting, vibrantly red cushioned wall seats, blending draperies and blue-gray walls set off the distinctive portraits. It has naturally become a meeting place of discriminating people.

Donna Mason is back sitting on the piano and singing with Nat Lipton as she used to do when the room was opened two years ago. In the interim, Donna has been appearing in Pittsburgh and Montreal, but the Colony is her "real home."

Donna's blond hair—natural and pretty—and perfect English seem to belie her Mexican origin, but she explains that there are many blonds in Mexico; tourists just think they're seeing other tourists.

"I should lose my temper and show them I'm Mexican," she says.

She was born in the small town of Guanjuato and moved to California at the age of 13, which explains her facile English.

She sings anything from folk song to old favorites. She's another graduate of the Vin Gallagher training—she sang at his King Cole Room for two years. During that time she made friends who have been following her career wherever she goes. She sings her songs, as all of Gallagher's proteges do, carefully and with a little flip at the end. And always sitting on the piano with a mike in her hand.

Acting Is Better Than Casting

'Sidewalk' Musses Tidy Mr. Andrews

By Sonia Stein

DANA ANDREWS has always had a faint aroma of after-shave lotion and freshly laundered linen about him, so it's a bit difficult to accept him in "Where the Sidewalk Ends," in which he sleeps in his clothes and hangs around rooms scented with bedbugs.

It is also an unlikely place to find the manicured Gene Tierney, dressed to a rich rustle in Oleg Cassini gowns.

But there they are, at the Palace Theater, in as grubby and seamy a picture as has crossed my sidewalk in some time. Andrews, who is usually an earnest and well educated young district attorney, if he's mixed up with the law at all, is a plainclothes policeman in this Twentieth Century-Fox film. His bachelor apartment is a dingy hotel room and his family background doesn't bear much discussion.

Miss Tierney, dressed in all elegance since she is playing a fashion model, does not live in a penthouse apartment as movie models usually do, or in a bandbox as I personally suspected. She lives in a clean but crowded apartment which doubtless smells occasionally of cabbage as well as Chanel No. 5, and shares it with a talkative father.

The upshot of this is, that the characters in the picture take on a niceness from the audience's past experiences with Andrews and Miss Tierney, rather than from anything in the picture itself.

With this evil of the star system coupled with miscasting, "Where the Sidewalk Ends" near comes a cropper. But not quite, because it is a grimly fascinating story in which a man comes face to face with himself over a corpse and a girl, and an act of poor judgment for which he can never atone.

The picture, to close in on that, is the story of a policeman with an unusually strong hatred of "hoods" and mobsters which manifests itself all too often in brutality. Deserved though it may be, this brutality doesn't sit well with his superiors.

Mussing up a suspect in a murder case, Andrews accidentally kills him. With his reputation, combined with the victim's reputation as a war hero, it looks a bit sticky, so Andrews disposes of the body and figures to pin the rap on a hood he'd like to get at anyway. The blame, unfortunately, falls on an innocent cab driver whose daughter happens to be Gene Tierney. Andrews tries every way possible to clear things up without sticking his own neck in the noose, and then finally does that in a moment of despondency over his own inability to be a good cop. Suspecting himself of having criminal tendencies like his father before him, he's ready to give up.

The Cabbage Lingers

The picture means to end hopefully, but there's something depressing about Andrews surviving to marry Miss Tierney and live in a clean but crowded apartment smelling occasionally of cabbage, and equipped with a garrulous father-in-law. I mean to say, if I've not made it clear, that Andrews doesn't fit the part. Hollywood has its share of young men who don't talk very good English and who would get better than they deserve if they wound up in a clean but crowded . . . oh, well.

The picture, made from a screen play by Ben Hecht from a novel by William L. Stuart, is well acted and in most particulars well cast.

Even Andrews does a good acting job within his orbit. It's just not in him to suggest to a young lady who is about to bandage his head that she take an ax to it instead.

Gary Merrill, as the hood whose big, white teeth Andrews is aching to kick in, and Tom Tully, as Miss Tierney's father, do impressive work. The smaller roles are also well handled with the notable exception of Oleg Cassini, dress designer for the picture and real life husband of Miss Tierney, who is included for laughs, I suppose.

TENSION is running riot but evidently not between Audrey Totter and Barry Sullivan, two of the characters in "Tension" which opened yesterday at the Metropolitan Theater on a double bill with "Congolaise," a jungle picture

'All Quiet' Still Powerful Despite Weakness in Acting

WITH the United States again discovering painfully that war is not something we jump into of our own volition, it seems a singularly poor time to reissue "All Quiet on the Western Front," the 1930 Academy Award winner which preaches peace as if it could be had for the wishing.

Opening at the Dupont Theater this morning, the film is an aching reminder that a man dies just as surely spitted on a bayonet as he does blown to Kingdom Come with an atomic bomb. As a work of art, it seems curiously not up to snuff in 1950 . . . not for any lack in the camera techniques or film, which is all good enough considering its age, but because of some of the acting in it.

Lew Ayres, the leading young actor, is the leading offender. Ayres has matured much as an actor over the years, and while it is customary to laugh at his Dr. Kildare pictures and refer nostalgically to his work in "All Quiet on the Western Front," the point is actually not well made.

Louis Wolheim, as the hardened soldier with a tender heart, does a fine job, however, and the cast is all adequate to the purpose.

The purpose is to show that war is not glory. It is mud and blood and hunger and loneliness.

The picture is laid in Germany during World War I, and shows the progress of a classroom of schoolboys from the initial stages of excitement and desire to fight for the Fatherland, through disillusion over the horror and futility, and finally utter emptiness.

Some of the picture is superbly done, the scenes of hand-to-hand battle in the trenches being as grueling as any such scenes anywhere, although no attempt was made at melodrama. The scenes of Paul spending huors in a shell hole with a French soldier who is dying of bayonet wounds inflicted by Paul, is superbly directed. That Ayres did not handle it as an actor, doesn't detract seriously.

Two famous scenes which you may remember from earlier encounters with the film, or have surely heard about, are the one in which a pair of hands is seen dangling from a piece of barbed wire, and the final one in which a boy's hand, reaching for a butterfly in the trenches, is suddenly still and lifeless after a shot rings out, leaving "all quiet on the western front." They are both exquisite bits of story telling for which Director Lewis Milestone is deservedly famous.

Taken from Erich Maria Remarque's novel, and prepared for the screen by Maxwell Anderson and George Abbott, this picture has had a curious history. It is estimated that 100 million persons, or one fourth of the literate population of the world, saw it when it was first issued in 1930. But it was issued with a number of scenes deleted to reduce friction between Germany and her recent enemies. In 1939, when the picture was reissued, banned scenes were restored but the picture was cut in half for reasons of length and a running commentary of a propaganda nature was added.

The current film is said to contain all of the critical film with the commentary removed, and is probably more powerful artistically than the 1930 version, although that version won five international prizes in addition to the Academy Award.

In any case, "All Quiet on the Western Front" is certainly a picture to be seen for its historical value as a piece of art, and for its historical value in the halting progress of man.

Man-Eaters Star on Screen; Whodunit Sets an Easy Pace

By Orval Hopkins
Post Reporter

YEARS ago, before most of you kids were born, there was a movie called "Trader Horn." In it an African native was thrown for a large loss by a rhinoceros and the customers were favored with a long-drawn scream, as if the native were in serious throes. It turned out to be a fake, and since that time I have steered shy of jungle pictures.

The jungle picture now at the Metropolitan, however, is no fake, unless these old bifocals have deceived me, and there are parts of it that are pretty exciting stuff. These include sequences in which a wounded bull elephant charges his tormentors, an African lion pounces on a scampering native boy, and a giant gorilla is slain and his great carcass dragged unceremoniously in the dust.

There is a good deal too much of people jogging inanely around in circles in "Congolaise," which is the name of the film, and also too much of natives endlessly paddling their big canoes along a broad African river. The hunting scenes, however, are excellent and the shots of the big-lipped Ubangi people fascinating and revolting.

Also at the Met is a film called "Tension." It is notable, from what I saw of it, for the presence of Audrey Totter in a variety of tight sweaters and for that of Tom D'Andrea, whose rowdy, easy style ought to earn him a break one of these times. The picture is a whodunit which moves along fairly well despite an inept performance by Barry Sullivan, who plays a cop and acts as though he'd been seeing too many movies with cops in them. Miss Totter is something striking, to put it blandly, and Richard Basehart does very well.

There is a short in color at the Met which features the talents of A. Godfrey, P. Como and B. Crosby. It took me quite a while to discover that it was all a big buildup for the cigarette company this triumvirate works for on the radio. Is this what the movies are coming to? Aren't things bad enough? Help!

The Chance of a Lifetime for Opera Lovers

By Paul Hume

THE LITTLE'S current double opera bill includes a surprise knockout.

It's called "Rossini," and gives you a real chance to learn about the life of this lady-killer, as well as the way operas are made and put over. Not even a determined claque could ruin the success of the Barber of Seville. But this film shows you how close they came.

It also gives you what may be the only chance of your lifetime to hear music from Rossini's version of Othello, and his famous Moses.

The sound track is very good, though a bit over-brilliant. The singing comes from some great artists. Of these, Gabriella Gatti, Gianna Pederzini, Tancredi Pasero and Mariano Stabile stand with the finest singers today.

Plus Rossini, the screen shows you credible accounts of Paganini, Beethoven, Paisiello, and more of the famous men who thronged Italian, French, and German music halls a hundred years ago. It's one of the best musical films we have seen.

With it comes an amusing version of "L'Elisir d'amore" by Donizetti. More dialogue and less singing makes this seem a little long, chiefly because the sound track is harsh and the voices are lacking in distinction. Tagliavini handles the tenor part, but less handsomely than the baritone who sings Doctor Dulcamara so well.

Over the weekend the Little will show an outstanding life of Verdi, with Gigli, Tassinari, Cebotari and others in music from Aida, Otello, Traviata, Trovatore and lots more. The bill is shared with "The Dream of Butterfly," based on Puccini's music.

RIPE olives and green pepper slices are used by Madame Antonie Charlot in garnishing a casserole of delectable Pizzaiola Napolitana

By William Klemm—The Washington Post

Continental Cooks Know the Secret

Skilled Seasoning Dresses Up Your Dinner

By Lucia Brown

IF YOU'RE worried about the high cost of entertaining, lend an ear to the Europeans.

The French, the Italians, and a lot of other Continentals, too, can take a smidgen of meat and make it taste like a million. They mix it up with other good—but cheaper—things, add a special sauce, and voila! There's a dish that's an epicure's delight. It's a good trick to turn when guests are coming, the food budget low, and meat prices high.

Madame Antonie Charlot, who teaches Continental cookery here, suggests a menu built around Pizzaiola Napolitana. (She once conducted a cooking school in Florence, thinks the Italians are best of all when it comes to savory, filling main dishes.)

To give the menu an interesting Continental touch, she suggests starting the meal with a Danish fruit soup. With the Pizzaiola Napolitana, she says, serve a tossed green salad. Then for dessert, take a tip from the Austrians and serve chocolate foam, made with ground hazelnuts.

It's an easy menu for the girl with a job, she says, for you can prepare the soup and dessert the night before.

Hazelnuts for the dessert can be ground in advance, and kept in a jar on the shelf. (They're a favorite item of Austrian cookery, used for tortes and such delicacies.) Toast the shelled nuts by placing in a pan in a 375 degree oven, shaking them occasionally. After nuts have toasted well, rub off the skins by rolling them between the hands and put the nut meats through the grinder.

Here are Madam Charlot's recipes, all of which serve four persons:

COLD FRUIT SOUP WITH CREAM

1 cup frozen raspberries
1 cup red currants, or ½ cup red currant jelly
1 cup sour cherries
Sugar to taste
½ cup tapioca
1½ cups boiling water
1 pint scalded milk
½ pint table cream

Add the tapioca to the boiling water in a double boiler. Cook until transparent. Cook all fruit until tender, letting it simmer about 15 minutes. Mash the fruits or put them through a strainer. Combine the fruit with the cooked tapioca, gently blending. Chill thoroughly. Just before serving, pour the mixed milk and cream, well chilled, over the fruit mixture, serving in small individual bowls.

PIZZAIOLA NAPOLITANA

1½ pound veal, out of the leg
½ cup olive oil
1 tablespoon butter
1 pound fresh tomatoes, or 2 small cans Italian tomato sauce
1 cup boiling water
1 bay leaf
½ teaspoon Oregano
1 clove garlic
1 medium-sized onion
1 sprig parsley, finely chopped
1 teaspoon finely chopped carrot
½ cup Marsala wine
½ teaspoon pepper
Salt
½ pound fine spaghetti
½ cup Parmesan cheese, grated
Black olives
Green peppers, sliced

Pound the veal to tenderize. Cut it into 1-inch cubes. Salt and pepper the pieces and saute them in butter in a frying pan until golden brown.

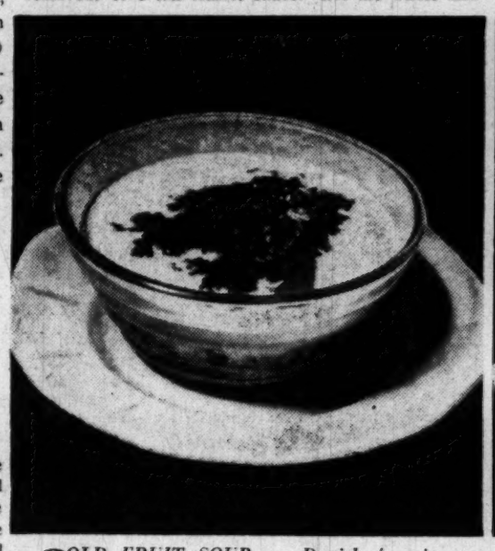
In a well-closed stewing pan put the oil, the finely sliced onion, crushed garlic, oregano, bay leaf, parsley, and the carrot cut in fine cubes. Simmer it for about ½ hour, well closed, until onion is golden brown. Add the meat, the peeled tomatoes (with seeds removed) or 1 can tomato sauce. Let the whole mixture, well closed, cook for another ½ hour, stirring and adding some drops of boiling water occasionally. After 20 minutes of cooking, add the other can of tomato sauce and now, little by little, the Marsala wine.

Cook spaghetti in water in the usual way. Arrange a layer of spaghetti—about half of it—on the bottom of a shallow dish, glass or earthenware, greased with butter. Pour the whole meat dish on the top, using about half the sauce. Cover with another layer of spaghetti and all the combined sauce. Sprinkle the grated cheese over it and put it into the oven until the cheese is melted. Garnish with black olives, cut in half, and thin slices of pepper.

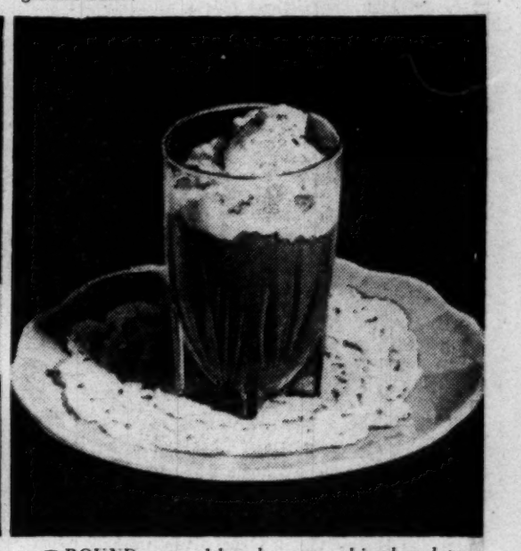
CHOCOLATE FOAM

3 tablespoons cocoa
3 tablespoons toasted, ground hazelnuts
4 tablespoons sugar
2 tablespoons bread crumbs
2 egg whites
½ pint whipping cream, whipped

Mix the cocoa, the nuts, the sugar, the bread crumbs, and fold in the well-beaten egg whites and half the whipped cream. Put in dessert glasses and chill in refrigerator. If you put it in the coldest part, so that it becomes semifrozen, it will be even better. Garnish with whipped cream just before serving. Dust top with ground nuts.



COLD FRUIT SOUP—a Danish favorite—makes a wonderful beginning for your continental supper in the summertime. It's thickened with tapioca, served with cream



GROUND, toasted hazelnuts top this chocolate foam dessert, made by an Austrian recipe. More hazelnuts give the chocolate part delicious flavor, too

Resistance to Exercises Is Mental—Do Them Daily

By Ida Jean Kain

THE thought of plunging into an exercise routine goes against the grain. But it's only mental and if you'll ease into stretching, then swing into limbering bends, you'll enjoy the session. So "put on your shoes with wings on, the winter's gone the spring's on" . . . turn on some music and get in shape.

To get the best out of exercise, take these tips. Stop exercise at the height of its invigorating effect . . . don't continue until weariness sets in. Here's the test—you should feel better the next day for having had a workout. You may be a little bit stiff, but not weary, and you should feel more and more limber with each successive day. If not, you are overdoing. A small amount of regular daily exercise is far and away better than a big dose once every two weeks.

Stretch right arm forward and part way up, and right leg back and part way up . . . and p-u-l-l through the middle measurement. Stretch for streamlines, repeating about three times, slow and easy. Then stretch along the left side.

Now step off to a snappy tune, lifting alternate knees high, drum major style. Up with left knee as you circle left arm up and around and down . . . then flex right knee and circle with right arm, up, around and back down, making wide backward circle. The knee raising tones the girdle muscles, provided you pull slim through the middle and hold with those muscles. The arm circling beautifies the chest and straightens shoulders.

Add a little side-bending for limbering and for midriff and waist slimming. For practice, stand still, pull slim and bend to the side, arms arched overhead. The technique is to bend at the waist and feel the muscle pull from armpit to the top of the hip bone. Don't let the hips bow out at the sides as you bend, and don't let the small of the back sink in. This can be prevented by pulling up snugly with the front muscles. After you get the bend down pat, do a little fancy footwork if you're in a gay mood.

If this is your first go at exercise this season, stretch and bend through a couple of records only—six minutes of exercise will be enough. This easy trio of daily exercise can pull you out of the dumps.

Professionally Trained Man in Early Twenties Feels He Has Found the Ideal Girl, But She Says Her Love Is Given to Former Suitor Who Quit Her

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: For several months I have been going with a girl whom you would call the ideal companion. She is well educated, comes of a very nice family and has every feminine quality to suit my taste. We are both in our early twenties and I am just about ready to enter a profession for which I am trained, and which she fully approves.

Recently she confronted me with an item of past history. She told of an incident in which she was disappointed in love. She had been going with a fellow for about six months and was engaged to him, when they had a slight misunderstanding and he didn't see her any more. She feels that she will always love him and therefore cannot love anyone else, even though she thinks I am the ideal person for her, and one whom she long had wanted to know.

I think we make an ideal couple. We have many mutual interests; we like and enjoy each other as friends, and in addition I love her very much and feel that I shouldn't give her up. Everyone tells her she should marry me and stop looking back; and I try to reason with her that she does love me, but due to the past disappointment, is afraid to attempt a love relationship again.

Alice says you have helped others with your counsel and vows to abide by your judgment in this matter. So the question is—Although I could give her everything, do you think I should let her go, and seek another girl who would love me? Or should I continue to court Alice, in the hope that eventually she will forget the past and love me as she would like to do? Please answer soon, as a help to us—and doubtless to many others in a similar predicament. R. B.

Man's Attiude Is Ineffectual

DEAR R. B.: Here I have digested your letter into a straightforward story, keeping the essence of your phrasing, but eliminating a lot of diffuse rhetoric. This I mention because one's writing style holds up a mirror to one's personality—"The style is the man" in that field of expression. And I gather from your raggedy writing that you are somewhat a jellyfish personality, which probably explains your failure with Alice.

Because of your vagueness, uncertainty in putting your ideas across, etc., you are easy to get on with, no doubt. But you don't impress Alice as being the he-man type. You haven't matured to that phase yet; but the fact that you haven't doesn't mean that you won't. It takes the right girl to build dynamic self-confidence into a diffident man.

In speaking of a past disappointment in love, Alice is proffering tactful excuse for not loving you, and possibly she thinks the excuse holds true. But the real reason is that you don't appeal to her positively, either mentally or physically; and that is something you can's change, nor can she. At best you can only face the fact honestly and undertake constructive acceptance of it.

He Needs Hearty Conjugal Devotion

ALICE can't make up her mind to let you go because she is impressed by your social qualifications, even if she can't thrill to your presence. She probably feels she ought to marry soon, thus she finds it reassuring to keep company with a man who urges her to be his wife. And also of course it pleases her to know that "everyone" thinks well of you, enough to privately plead in your favor.

I suppose she has moments of thinking she'll never get a better offer, and no doubt she is genuinely fond of you, in a way. So she wavers and ponders, keeping you on the anxious seat.

Now for my advice: In my opinion, your type of man needs a happier, heartier brand of wifely devotion than Alice could give in marriage to you. As an aid to being a good husband and father, and to repair the daily wear-and-tear of doing a job and maintaining a family in this parlous century, a sensitive fellow should be warmly loved by his domestic partner, not just tolerated or intellectually "appreciated" for the things he can give her. And in a case of this kind, where the girl can't make up her mind, a man who really is a man will eventually bow out decisively, and that's what I think you should do. M. H.

Mary Haworth counsels through her column, not by mail or personal interview. Write her in care of The Washington Post.

Tobe' Says...

Fuller Skirts Still Smart

I cannot repeat often enough that no established fashion ever goes out entirely when a new one comes in. We'd all go crazy if it did, trying to keep up with fashion. So, in spite of the big swing to the sheath silhouette, there are plenty of dresses with fuller skirts that are smart as well.

In cocktail and evening dresses there are still frankly full skirts in beautiful crisp fabrics. But for daytime, most fullness is modified so that dresses look slimmer, anyhow; front fullness with straight sides; back fullness with slim fronts; all-round pleated fullness that hangs straight and slim.

So you need not be afraid to follow your preference for fuller skirts—you can still look smart!

Daytime Care of Children Commands a Variable Fee In Approved D. C. Homes

DEAR ANNE:

We have two children of school age being cared for in a neighbor's home while my husband and I are at work. Due to the rising cost of living, we would like some advice on a year-round pay basis. We pay every two weeks, so would like an approximate average for each pay period.

During the summer months, the children are boarded out from 8 a. m. to 6 p. m, five days a week, including lunches and afternoon snacks.

During the winter the children will be in need of care from 3:30 to 6 p. m. However, during the school months I wish my apartment to be gone over each day, including washing the breakfast dishes, making the beds, dusting and straightening.

We have reason to know the children are getting good care and well-balanced lunches, also that they like the lady caring for them. We're sure there must be some standards for such services and would appreciate your help.

Daily Reader, Washington.

I've checked with the Foster Day Care and Counseling Association, a Red Feather agency that supervises homes licensed by the District of Columbia for the day care of children. They tell me the price charged for caring for two youngsters by a "day care mother" in her own home generally runs around $18 or $20 a week. (Prices charged for one youngster alone range from $8 to $12.50 weekly.) It all depends on the woman caring for the children. One who is particularly fond of children and not dependent on this work for income, charges only $13 for two youngsters a week.

As I understand the second paragraph of your letter, you want someone to take care of your apartment as well as the children each day. I'm not sure of exactly what sort of arrangement you have in mind here. However, the United States Employment Service tells me $25 a week is about the average price paid for housekeeping service including some child care here in the District. Pay for such work varies a great deal from home to home, they point out. Some people want to pay only $15 a week, while others offer up to $40. As in everything else, they say, you generally get about what you pay for.

DEAR ANNE:

Can I paint the linoleum in our kitchen satisfactorily? It has become worn in places, so that the pattern is gone in spots, and the color rather faded elsewhere.

L. P., Washington.

Yes, you can give it a coat of paint to cover the worn pattern and freshen it. Important thing in this operation is to be sure to get all old wax and grease off the floor before putting on the paint. You'll have an unsatisfactory job if you don't. A special linoleum cleaner is the best way to clean these off. Benzine or naptha may be used, but WARNING! WARNING! WARNING! They're highly inflammible and should be used only with lots of ventilation and care.

21 D. C. Hadassah Delegates To Confer on Israel Projects

Discussion and formulation of plans to continue, and in some cases step up health, welfare and land reclamation projects in Israel will be among the major tasks of 21 Hadassah delegates named recently by the Washington Chapter to attend the thirty-sixth annual convention of the women's Zionist organization of America.

Those chosen to attend the conclave, which will be held at the Waldorf Astoria in New York City from August 20 through August 23 include Mrs. Benjamin Manchester, president, Mrs. Joseph Freedman, Mrs. Alex Hassan, Mrs. Serge Rips, Mrs. Barney Lenkin, Mrs. Harry Burka, Mrs. Irving Jacobs, Mrs. Bernard Boymel, Mrs. Ida C. Proser, Mrs. I. S. Turover, Mrs. Joseph Haber, Mrs. Moe Marcus, Mrs. Fred Gichner, Mrs. Rachel Kossow, Mrs. Alex Rosenson, Mrs. Aaron Gerber, Mrs. Leonard Sussman, Mrs. Mark Smith, Miss Celia Gold, Miss Anne Mendelson. Mrs. Raphael Turover, who has just returned from Israel, and who is the Washington representative to the National board of Hadassah will also be attending.

Approval of a budget of more than six million dollars for the ensuing year's medical welfare, youth services and land redemption projects will be sought.

From a humble beginning in 1913, when Hadassah sent two American trained nurses to help combat disease in Jerusalem, the organization's program has expanded to where today it includes a network of eight hospitals, partnership with the Hebrew University in Israel's only medical schools, 63 child welfare stations which give prenatal and postnatal care to mothers and children, a mental hygiene clinic, a school for nurses, a preventive medical center and medical supervision of 150,000 children in schools and kindergartens.

In addition, Hadassah's activities in Israel include training young people for trade and industry in the Brandeis Vocational Center in Jerusalem, school luncheons and nutrition study for 35,000 children daily.

More than 1500 delegates and guests at the convention will hear Senator Brien McMahon, chairman of the Joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy, and Dr. Eli Davis of Jerusalem, head of the Hadassah Medical Oganization in Israel who is flying to the convention to give a full report on the past year's medical activities.

Brass and Gold Braid Glisten at Embassy Reception

By Marie McNair and Elizabeth Maguire

THE TOP military attended a reception held yesterday at the Portuguese Embassy. It was a farewell to Brig. Abranches Pinto, who with Senora Pinto is leaving soon for Portugal. Guests were received in the library by the host and hostess, Ambassador and Senhora de Esteves Fernandes, and by the honor guests between the hours of 6 and 8 o'clock.

The weather made little difference on this occasion, as the Portuguese Embassy has a delightful indoor climate, cool as early May. Uniformed men were at ease in their colorful gold braid and beribboned jackets, as groups of conversation formed in the drawing rooms. Cocktails were passed and a light buffet was served in the dining room.

For many in Washington it was a first introduction to the new Portuguese Ambassador and his wife, who will definitely be counted as one of the town's most attractive diplomatic couples. Brigadier Pinto has served in Washington at the embassy as military and air attache since March, 1950, and he is returning to Portugal to take up important new duties as Minister of the Army.

A happy return awaits the brigadier and his wife, whose four children, ranging between 11 and 20, are now in Lisbon attending school.

Guests invited to yesterday's farewell party included the Secretary of Defense and Mrs. Louis Johnson, the Chief of Staff of the U. S. Air Force and Mrs. Hoyt Vandenberg, the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and Mrs. Omar Bradley, the Secretary of the Army and Mrs. Frank Pace, jr., the Chief of Naval Operations Admiral Forrest P. Sherman and Mrs. Sherman, the Army Chief of Staff and Mrs. J. Lawton Collins, Lieut. Gen. and Mrs. Lauris Norstad, Gen. and Mrs. Carl Andrew Spaatz and many more.

Military and air attaches of the different embassies were guests as well as chiefs of mission and top representatives of the State Department. It was an impressive gathering in one of the most beautiful embassies in Washington.

She was graduated from Miss Porter's School at Farmington Conn., this spring and will attend Sarah Lawrence College in the fall.

Miss Strauss is the granddaughter of Mrs. Joseph Strauss of Washington and the late Admiral Strauss. Mrs. Foote entertained at a tea yesterday afternoon to present her daughter to her friends and last night gave a dance for young people. "I love being a diplomat," she said.

D. C. Legion Auxiliary Convention Opens

Past Leader Key Speaker

THE Silver Anniversary Convention of the D. C. American Legion Auxiliary opened last night at the Willard Hotel on the keynote of "Universal Military Training and Americanism."

Mrs. Lawrence Smith, former national president of the auxiliary, and wife of the Representative from Wisconsin, stressed those two objectives for the Auxiary, was the principal speaker of the evening.

"We need universal military training now more than ever before," she stated, "not because we want to go to war, but as an insurance for peace."

If we are prepared, she continued, an aggressor is less likely to attack us. But if we are attacked, at least we'll be prepared.

Mrs. Smith, who was president of the auxiliary in the 1943-'44 term, said that most complaints she has heard from mothers of boys fighting in Korea are that the soldiers have been sent to war with insufficient training. Universal military training would have prevented this, she said.

Mrs. Smith then defended Senator McCarthy's recent campaign against alleged Communists in the Government. Some people object to his tactics, but he had to "blast" to get recognition, she asserted. One Communist in a policy-making position in the Government is worse than 20 on the firing line, she went on.

Mrs. Rose Perkins, president of the D. C. department of the auxiliary, called the meeting to order. The department chaplain, Mrs. Ethel Wilt, pronounced the invocation, and Miss Ive Smathers, Americanism chairman, led the Pledge of Allegiance to the Flag.

"The Star-Spangled Banner was sung by Miss Velma Crow. Then followed brief addresses by Mrs. J. Florence Dietsche, national executive committeewoman, and Mrs. Pearl Heagerty, department convention chairman, George N. Craig.

Fairfax Launches Monticello Hwy. Land Survey

The Fairfax County Board of Supervisors has authorized a $3000 study of the land that would be involved in a proposed Monticello hwy., linking the Jefferson Memorial here to Jefferson's colonial home in Charlottesville, Va.

Funds approved by the board will be used in a survey to determine what land rights will be needed along a 14-mile stretch of the proposed highway passing through the county. The county section would run from a point near the Shirley hwy. to the Prince William County line near Manassas.

Rufus Coldwell, of Fairfax, chairman of a local Monticello hwy. committee, said the present plan is to get the county's share of the road incorporated in the local secondary road system, than have the State take it into the primary system for eventual expansion into the proposed Memorial highway.

Low-Cost Housing Seen as FHA Must In Defense Plan

The Government moved yesterday to help construction of moderate and low-cost housing and to sidetrack financing of more expensive homes because of the defense program.

The Federal Housing Administration notified its field officers to judge applications for home loans on the basis of "need." The directive was seen as an unofficial notice to go slow on luxury homes.

An FHA spokesman said the agency "will continue to accept all applications which come within our authority," but he indicated future applications will be scanned more closely.

FHA officers were ordered to approve loans only if the contractor is ready to start building immediately and expects to finish the job within a year.

Woman Gas Station Operator Is Beaten

Winchester, Va., Aug. 10 (AP).—An unknown assailant today slugged and beat Mrs. Mary Wallace Stoehr, 58-year-old service station operator on old Route 50 five miles east of here.

Police said they talked tonight with Mrs. Stoehr at the Winchester Memorial Hospital here but could not determine immediately if any money was taken from the station.

Mrs. Stoher told officers that a man drove up in an old model sedan and ordered five gallons of gas and a quart of oil. He drank a bottle of soda while she was putting the gas in the car and then beat her over the head with the bottle as she reached for the oil, Mrs. Stoehr told police. He also beat her with his fists.

Armed Theft Suspect Jailed, Faces Trial

Forrest Walker, 20, of no fixed address, was sentenced to 90 days in Municipal Court yesterday for committing an indecent act and 60 days for carrying a deadly weapon. He was also held for the grand jury on a housebreaking charge.

Police said Walker was committed to Gallinger Hospital last November for mental observation, later escaped and disappeared. On June 19, he was found in Meridian Park committing an indecent act, police said, carrying a butcher knife and some clothes he is accused of stealing from H. Abramson Co., 7th and L sts. nw.

Famed Soviet Geologist Lands in U. S. as DP

New York, Aug. 10 (U.P.).—Prof. Andre Karpinsky, 50, famous Russian geologist, landed in the United States as a DP today. He was accompanied by his wife.

Karpinsky, who was taken prisoner by the Germans at Leningrad, was put to work mending roads. After the war he tore up his identity card rather than return to Russia.

Karpinsky said the Russia people feel a great fondness for the American people, but that this feeling is mixed with envy for the American standard of living.

Rallies to Highlight Lane Campaign Drive

Final plans for a series of rallies to highlight an all-out campaign to reelect Gov. W. Preston Lane, jr., and the county ticket are being made by the Democratic Victory Committee.

The committee has opened headquarters at 11167 Georgia ave., Wheaton, Md., and a meeting of the 36 candidates sponsored by the committee will be held Saturday from 4 to 6 p. m. Democratic precinct leaders have been invited to attend the meeting.

One Man Fined, One Acquitted In County Crash

Styod A. Bock, 13307 Okinawa ave., Rockville, Md., whose car was struck by a Montgomery County truck Tuesday was acquitted on charges of reckless driving yesterday by Trial Magistrate Alger Y. Barbee in Rockville Police Court.

The truck driver, Edmund D. Biggs, 37, of 731 Easley st., Silver Spring, who had a miraculous escape when his truck loaded with eight tons of bluestone turned upside down, was fined $15 on the same charges.

Bock had started to make a right turn from Viers Mill rd. into Halpine rd., when a car following him slowed suddenly. The truck driver, to avoid striking the second car, ran to the right and lost control on the soft shoulder. His truck ran far enough to strike the Bock car and then overturned.

Gov. Duff Urges Capital Penalty For Communists

Philadelphia, Aug. 10 (U.P.).—Gov. James H. Duff today called on all State legislatures in the United States to make Communism treason and subject to capital punishment.

"Instead of putting these guys in jail for five years they ought to be hanged," the outspoken, red-haired Duff told the thirty-second annual convention of the Pennsylvania Department of the American Legion.

"There is a man in Philadelphia who had pleaded guilty to charges of stealing secrets for Russia," Duff said, referring to Chemist Harry Gold. "Why should creatures like these be allowed to live while men are dying in Korea?"

Boykin Resigns $8000 Sesqui Post

Resignation of Edward Boykin as director of historical and cultural activities for the National Capital Sesquicentennial Commission was announced yesterday by Carter T. Barron, executive vice chairman.

Barron said it was "with great regret" that the resignation, effective September 10, was received.

He pointed out that it was under Boykin's direction that the Sesquicentennial symphonic drama at the Rock Creek amphitheater and the exhibitions of historical art at the National Corcoran galleries of art—all major Sesquicentennial projects—had been carried out.

Boykin, a Charlottesville, Va., radio commentator and conductor of a radio program on American history, was named to the Sesquitennial Commission Post in July, 1948.

Among forthcoming Sesqui activities are: special ceremonies in connection with V-J Day, August 14; President's Cup Regatta, September 16-17; Police and Firemen's baseball game, September 20; and various State honor days.

Gallup Poll

Most Favor U. S. Envoy At Vatican

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Aug. 10.—Appointing an American envoy to the Vatican, an issue which has stirred up controversy in church circles, is approved by the weight of opinion in a national survey just completed by the American Institute of Public Opinion.

At his press conference last week President Truman said that the question of establishing formal diplomatic relations with the Vatican is under study.

Presdient Roosevelt set the precedent by appointing Myron C. Taylor as his personal representative to the Pope in the early days of World War II. Mr. Taylor resigned last year, and President Truman has delayed the decision to replace him.

The groups who are opposed to having a representative at the Vatican argue that it involves a violation of the ancient principle of the separation of church and state, a precept which has been followed in this country since the days of the Pilgrim fathers.

In sounding out public opinion on the issue the Institute put two questions. The first was:

"During recent years, President Roosevelt and President Truman have had a personal representative at the Vatican (headquarters of the Pope) in Rome. Do you think this has been a good idea or a poor idea?"

The vote:

Good idea	45%
Fair idea	5
Poor idea	13
No opinion	37
	100%

The second question was as follows:

"Would you like to have our Government in Washington send an American representative to the Vatican in the future?"

The results are:

Yes	45%
No	13
Indifferent	8
No opinion	34
	100%

Persons who classify themselves as Democrats were found considerably more in favor of the idea than those who classify themselves as Republicans.

Among the former group the vote is 51 percent in favor and 8 percent opposed, with the rest indifferent or undecided. Among Republicans, the vote is 39 percent in favor to 23 percent opposed, with the rest indifferent or undecided.

Brief but Lusty Rainstorm Cuts D. C. Temperature

It also put a $150 dent in a brand new cab owned by Harry H. Hollingsworth of Beverly Park Gardens, Alexandria.

A tree, toppled by gusts which accompanied the storm, fell atop the cab, parked at 6th and H sts. ne.

The intense storm, which lasted less than 10 minutes, ripped down overhead wires and tree limbs through the District. It dropped the temperature from 87 at 4:55 p. m. to 71 at 6:45 p. m.

The Weather Bureau said the rainfall measured only .15 of an inch.

The weather fare promised for today was this: "Rather cloudy, warm and humid . . . scattered afternoon showers . . . high in the upper 80s."

Montgomery Policemen Take Training Course

The classes are being taught by Inspector James S. McAuliffe, Inspector Arthur Miller of the Metropolitan Police in Washington; Detective Capt. G. W. Linthicum, Detective Sergts. Carroll Miller, and William Whalen, Sergts. Charles E. Peter and Mason Gray, Policeman Leslie Thompson, Police Chief Charles M. Orme and Juvenile Court Judge Alfred D.

Alexandria Taking To Drink Again —Water, That Is

The drinking water in Alexandria was nearly back to normal yesterday.

For the first time in a week, there was only a faint taste of the high-powered antiseptic that got into the water supply last Thursday after it was dumped by Army employes into a storm sewer near one of the Alexandria Water Company's "feeder" streams.

Officials of the company, who ordered a gradual "dilution" of the water supply by means of drainage from fire hydrants and the main filter plant, expressed hope the taste and odor would be completely gone by today. A speedier solution to the problem, they said, was considered inadvisable because draining of the water supply in large quantities might have imperiled the city's fire protection service.

Mollohan Returns To Old Post With Senate D. C. Group

Robert H. Mollohan returned to his former job as clerk of the Senate District Committee yesterday.

He had left early in the year to accept appointment as United States marshal for the Northern District of West Virginia.

Senate District Chairman Matthew M. Neely (D., W. Va.), said he had persuaded Mollohan to return to the District Commmittee job.

"I needed him here," said Neely. Mollohan's resignation as marshal was accepted yesterday by President Truman. The President sent to the Senate the nomination of Leo A. Casey of Parsons, W. Va., to succeed Mollohan as marshal.

Hogate's High Bidder For Army Plot Lease

Hogate's Restaurant was the high bidder for a five-year lease on Army-owned land on the southwest side of Maine ave. sw., at the foot of 9th st., it was announced yesterday.

The Army specified that the land, about 12,000 square feet, should be used as a parking lot for the general public. Hogate's, almost directly across the street, offered to pay an annual rental of $1830. The only other bidder was Johnson & Wimsatt, Inc., lumber company, also at 9th st. and Maine ave. This bid was $1812.

Pugh Quits Race For County Council

John C. Pugh of Poolesville yesterday withdrew as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for member of the County Council from the Third Council District.

His withdrawal leaves Mayor G. LaMar Kelly, jr., of Rockville as the unopposed candidate for the council seat on the Democratic ticket. Lathrop E. Smith of Travilah is the unopposed Republican candidate.

Pugh wrote to the board of election supervisors yesterday asking that his name be withdrawn as his physician had advised him not to make the race.

Truman Given Plaque By Interfaith Group

President Truman received a bronze plaque from the Interfaith Movement yesterday in recognition for "His conspicuous and courageous fight against the forces of hate and prejudice."

The plaque was presented by John D. Griffin editor and publisher of the New York Inquirer.

Admitting Theft Of Bike Doesn't Impress Judge

Beverly Clay Bowen, 24, of 17 9th st. ne., found yesterday that honesty does not always pay.

As he awaited sentencing by Municipal Court Judge Armond W. Scott, after pleading guilty to the theft of a bicycle, his lawyer reminded the judge:

"At least he was honest about it. He admits he took it."

"Well, he wasn't honest when he took it. Let him serve 90 days," was Judge Scott's answer.

Bowen admitted taking the bicycle August 7 from the basement of 310 E. Capitol st., where its owner, Police Pvt. Robert J. Allwang, of the Ninth Precinct, lives. He sold it for $4 to a second-hand shop several days later, police said.

Congress Library Puts Rare Books On Public Display

The Library of Congress, at the suggestion of the International Typographical Union, has placed some of its oldest and finest books on display in the Rare Books Division for the rest of the month.

The union is holding its ninety-second annual convention in Washington, August 19 through August 25.

Earlieist volume in the exhibition is a copy of "Rationale divinorum officiorum" printed by Fust and Schoeffer on October 6, 1459. Among American printers and designers represented are Benjamin Franklin, Isaiah Thomas and Bruce Rodgers.

Officials Check Possible Arson

Montgomery County fire and police officials are investigating the possibility of arson in a fire which burned a small vacant bungalow near Seminary rd. and Forest Glen rd., Forest Glen, Md., early yesterday.

Fireman Alfred W. Dennis, 24, 9 St. Paul st., Kensington, was treated at Suburban Hospital after his ankle was pierced by a nail while he was fighting the fire.

The bungalow has been vacant since the death of Miss Harriet Freeby, a retired attorney, more than a year ago. A larger house nearby was badly damaged by fire shortly after her death.

Kensington and Silver Spring Volunteer Fire Departments were unable to save the wooden structure. The fire was discovered by Corp. John G. Greenan, stationed at Walter Reed Annex of the Army Medical Center nearby.

Couple Best Sellers, But Thinly Disguised

By John Crosby

A COUPLE of the new radio comedies seem to have been borrowed from the best-seller lists. One of them, "Granby's Green Acres" (C. B. S.-WTOP, 9:30 p. m. Mondays) appears to have been hatched from "The Egg And I" with just a bit of Mr. Blandings and his dream house thrown in for good measure. The other one, "Too Many Cooks" (C.B.S.-WTOP, 9 p. m. Mondays), bears a striking resemblance to "Cheaper By the Dozen," the switch in this case being that the Cook family has only 10 instead of 12 children.

Crosby

Granby of the green acres is a middle-aged bank teller who yields to a lifelong urge to till the soil. Granby, who is already saddled with a rather dimwitted wife and a perpetually exasperated daughter, adds a farm to his other burdens. He knows nothing about farming and therein lay the laughs. Or that's where the laughs are supposed to lay. Maybe they're spending the summer in the city.

Low-Level Dialogue

THE DIALOGUE is cast on a level I thought had gone out with Mack Sennett. Here are a couple of samples:

"If I took a seed—a tiny white seed—covered it with earth and watered it occasionally, what would I have?"

"A dirty little white seed."

"John, wake up. The rooster is crowing."

"Well, turn it off."

As for the plot, well . . . Granby plants 180 acres of potatoes. The potato market goes to pot. He digs up the potatoes and plants wheat. Wheat goes to pot. He digs up the wheat and so on. Don't ask me how you dig up 180 acres of wheat seed. I left the farm country a long time ago and haven't been back. Maybe they've invented a machine to do it since I left.

It Looks Anti-Farm

WHEN he isn't planting and unplanting wheat, Granby is being outwitted by the country yokels or derided by his hired man, Eb, or nagged by his wife and daughter to move back to the city. I don't know what C. B. S. is up to with this anti-farm propaganda. Trying to scare people back to the city, I guess.

"Too Many Cooks" isn't a bad little ode to procreation as summer sustainers go. Hal March and Mary Jane Croft, as Douglas and Carrie Cook, somehow contrive to convey the impression that 10 children can be fun, though, of course, expensive. The kids are reasonably engaging but it's pretty hard to differentiate one from another. Their attitude toward their parents is one of long-suffering tolerance which is so fashionable on the radio just now. The parents in radio comedies are always just a little dumber than their youngest child.

It used to be that the wife was a paragon of wisdom, kindliness, energy and thrift. Now, it seems to me, the kids are gradually taking over. Come to think of it, the popularity of children in radio comedy is fairly recent. Domestic comedy used to be typified by Burns and Allen who didn't have any children underfoot. Then Ozzie and Harriet Nelson and their two offspring came along. Since then, children of all ages have been crawling around the networks. Been a great period for child actors. With "Too Many Cooks" the trend should have reached its crest and may be confidently expected to recede. It'd be hard to get more than 10 children around a microphone.

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Today We Start With a 'Collector's Item'

Speaking of out-of-State license tags (as we have been in recent columns) Philip M. Burnett of 7212 Ramsgate rd., Wood Acres, Md., offers an interesting observation.

He points out that though there are scads of these "foreign" cars in the Washington area, "collecting" all 48 States is quite a task.

Phil's 10-year-old nephew spent a week-end here recently, and on a trip to the Hill noticed the variety of license plates. Whipping out his notebook, he started to check them off. And though he made quite a haul, he was far short of 48 when the day ended.

The next day, the lad organized an expedition that scoured the District and its suburbs in search of the missing States. But by Monday morning, when Uncle Phil put him on a train to New York, he still lacked six—including Idaho and Utah.

You'd think that Congressmen from these distant States would stay on the job up at the Capitol, and quit making life so difficult for our young citizens.

TWIN BILL

Betsy Marsh of 3126 Rittenhouse st. nw. wonders whether we noticed the neighborhood movie marquee that last week offered:

"Wild Bill Hickok Rides," "The Flying Saucer."

MISCELLANY

It's a good thing there's no chance of the Cincinnati Nationals tangling with the New York Americans in the World Series this year. Headline scanners would get goose-pimples at the likes of: "Reds Defeat Yanks" . . . Edith G. Traeger of 830 D st. se. reports that the radio she offered through our Give-Aways was claimed by the Gray Ladies at George Washington University Hospital, to help keep the minds of a few of the patients there off their troubles. Edith is getting more pleasure out of the set now than when she owned it . . . Lawrence Halin of 521 Donmanton blvd., Alexandria, Va., thought he had lost his key ring the other day, but Post Carrier Boy Norman Harpo saved the day by bringing the keys to the door. PERSONAL NOTES

H. I. Bernard, 321 Massachusetts ave. ne.: I sympathize with anybody who has to roll out of the sack at the crack of dawn and be at work by 7 a. m., without a chance to read The Washington Post first. But Shirley Povich, Mary Haworth, Jerry Kluttz, Drew Pearson, Walter Winchell, Walter Lippmann, Herblock, Marquis Childs, Richard L. Coe, the Alsops, Ask Anne, the editorials, the comics and a dozen other exclusive Post features make just as good reading after dinner as before breakfast. And if you suffer from insomnia, try the District Line at bedtime. It's eheaper than a sleeping pill, and you can wrap your lunch in it the next day.

WOMEN

Feather-brained females and bird-minded biddies . . . Chatter of hubbies and hair-dos and kiddies . . . Women intelligent, cultured and rare . . . Talk about children and husbands and hair.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Legislators' Lush Lecture League

By Tom McNamara and Jack Anderson

The Korean crisis has put a crimp in the lush lecture fees of Senators and Congressmen. However, many still slip away for occasional week-end lectures when they need spare change. Their fees run from $200 to $750 an evening—though Vice President Barkley, the star attration, collects as high as $1500 for a one-night stand.

BARKLEY

These congressional lecturers argue that it is the only way they can keep up with the high expenses of entertaining, traveling and contributing to all the worthy charities expected of officeholders.

For example, Senator Hubert Humphrey, Minnesota, Democrat, was so broke after paying his campaign bills and moving his family to Washington that he had to borrow money in order to eat. He finally hired out as a lecturer on his spare nights, earned an extra $6000 last year.

Oregon's GOP Senator Wayne Morse went $25,000 in the hole during his first campaign, filled lecture engagements to make up the deficit. He still averages $10,000 a year speaking for hire.

Senator Estes Kefauver, Tennessee Democrat, needed $3000 to pay off his mortgage. He hit the lecture trail on week ends, earned enough in six months to pull out of the red.

Lecture Attraction

A top drawing card on the lecture circuit is Congressman Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., whose famous name commands a fat fee. However, his profits go to pay for extra stenographers to handle the heavy mail that deluges his congressional office, also because of his famous name. Last year he paid $12,000 out of his own pocket for office help, made up half of this from lecture fees.

In addition, even the millionaire Senators, such as Oklahoma's Bob Kerr, do some lecturing for hire. They usually assign the fee to some charity, however, such as Kerr's favorite—the Baptist Foundation in Oklahoma City.

Most Senators and Congressmen who do professional lecturing are handled by speakers' bureaus, which take a 30 percent cut. These agencies give their clients a ballyhoo buildup befitting movie stars. Here are a few samples:

Senator Charles Tobey, New Hampshire Republican—"A fast-talking Yankee who crusades realistically but relentlessly"; Congresswoman Helen Gahagan Douglas, California Democrat—"Glamorous and distinguished leader of the liberals"; Senator Joseph O'Mahoney, Wyoming Democrat—"A foremost exponent of truly free business."

Senator Styles Bridges, New Hampshire Republican—"Dynamic personality and a magnetic, sincere speaker"; Senator Lister Hill, Alabama Democrat—"Exceptionally well qualied to speak at industrial functions"; Senator Owen Brewster, Maine Republican—"Presents conclusions intelligently and with indisputable sincerity."

Meanwhile any private citizen can hear the same speeches almost any day on the floors of Congress—free of charge.

NOTE—Senator Joe McCarthy's speaking fee has trebled since hitting the headlines with his charges of Communist infestation in the State Department. Many Senators and Congressmen, such as Speaker Sam Rayburn and Senator Glen Taylor of Idaho won't speak for money.

Atom Bomb Bases

Secretary of the Air Force Finletter has been busy polishing up our blueprint for atom-bombing Russia. Needless to say, this plan will not be used unless the present war bursts beyond the Korean peninsula and sets off World War III.

But should total war come, the air force will use atomic bases in Europe as a springboard. If these are not available, giant B-36's will be assigned to carry atomic bombs from our Atlantic coast to the Russian interior.

The chief problem would be cracking through three radar rings which protect the heart of Russia from air attack. However, the Soviet frontier is so vast and the communications so poor that some B-36's would be bound to get through. In contrast to Russia's triple radar defenses, our own radar wall is only half completed.

Assurance on Korea

Gen. Omar Bradley, the Nation's No. 1 soldier, has flatly assured the President that American troops will not be pushed out of Korea.

Comparing the present Korean battle with the toehold the Allies held on Europe at historic Omaha Beach in June, 1944, Bradley drew some striking parallels. Here, in brief, is what he told the President:

1. We will soon have as many divisions in Korea as we had at Omaha beach, while the North Koreans will be almost the same numerical strength as the Germans surrounding Omaha beach.

2. While our forces in Korea are not as well trained as those we sent into Normandy, the North Korean troops don't compare with the German wehrmacht.

3. United Nations forces in Korea will have the same, or possibly greater, air superiority than they held at D-Day in Europe. The naval situation is also an exact parallel, since we control the seas.

Bradley recalled that, under these circumstances, the Allies gave a pretty good account of themselves in Normandy.

Two Are Indicted In Material Theft

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 10 (AP).—Two men fired from the Anne Arundel County roads force last fall have been indicted on charges of stealing road building materials from county stockpiles near Odenton.

Luke Hall, 45, a former shop mechanic of Parole, was charged with stealing tar and slag valued at $56.22 while Morris Pumphrey, 48, a former foreman of Odenton, was accused of taking tar and slag worth $52.02. Both men are free on $2500 bail.

U. S. Merchant Seamen To Get Loyalty Check

Newport News, Va., Aug. 10 (AP). Screening of all merchant seamen signing on American ships at this port will begin Friday, it was learned today from Jnited States Coast Guard officials.

A loyalty examination detail consisting of two or three men will be on hand when the American streamers Asbury Victory and Cooper Union Victory get their crews signed on by a deputy of the United Shipping Commissioners' office in Norfolk.

Coast Guard officials said it was understood the screening requirement had been issued as a general order effective July 30 in certain other ports on the Pacific and Gulf coasts.
